NO. 1.

BABSON GENEALOGY.

WIDOW Isabella Babson¹, born about 1579, and her son James Babson, were in Salem as early as 1637, when she was a grantee of lands there. She lived in Gloucester as early as 1644, and died there April 6, 1661, aged eighty-one. The uncommon name of Babson was often spelled Bapson in early times in Essex county. Mrs. Babson's only child, so far as is known, was JAMES BABSON². He resided in Gloucester, and was a cooper. He married Eleanor Hill Nov. 16, 1647; and died Dec. 21, 1683. She remained his widow, and died in Gloucester March 14, 1714, aged eighty-four.

Children, born in Gloucester:—

- 3—I. JAMES³, b. Sept. 29, 1648.
- 4—II. ELEANOR³, b. June 15, 1651.

"THE PILGRIM STRANGER."

A woman tropical, intense
 In thought and act, in soul and sense,
 She blended in a like degree
 The vixen and the devotee,
 Revealing with each freak or feint
 The temper of Petruccio's Kate,
 The raptures of Siena's saint.
 Her tapering hand and rounded wrist
 Had facile power to form a fist;
 The warm, dark languish of her eyes
 Was never safe from wrath's surprise.
 Brows saintly calm and lips devout
 Knew every change of scowl and pout;
 And the sweet voice had notes more high
 And shrill for social battle-cry.

—John G. Whittier.

HARRIET LIVERMORE.

Harriet Livermore was daughter of Hon. Edward St. Loe and Mehitable (Harris) Livermore, and was born in Concord, N. H., April 14, 1788. The father studied law with Chief-justice Parsons in Newburyport, Mass., settled in practice in Concord, N. H., removing to Lowell, Mass., and served for several terms in congress.

Though her mother died when Harriet was only five years old, she fondly cherished her memory and bitterly lamented her death. She disliked her sweet-tempered step-mother so much that at the age of eight she was placed in a boarding school in Haverhill, Mass., where through the intimacy between her father and Judge Minot she entered the best society. She subsequently lived on Spring street in Newburyport, and attended the Byfield Female Seminary, and later Atkinson Academy.

From her cradle days she was never at ease, because of her impetuosity, and her disposition was never under control. She was naturally generous, and was ever ready to confess her faults and seek forgiveness.

In her young womanhood, she was fine looking, of medium height and unusually graceful, and had a fair complexion, hair a yard and a quarter in length, black and glossy, and large black eyes, shaded by heavy brows.

While attending the academy at Atkinson she became acquainted and fascinated with a promising and scholarly young man, Moses H. Elliott, whose home was the old "Garrison house" in East Haverhill. Their acquaintance was continued after their academy days were over; and she, probably for the purpose of being near him, in 1811 commenced to teach school, first, for one or two terms, in a private house, and then for several terms in the old brown district school-house at East Haverhill, which was close to young Elliott's home.

He became a physician and began to practise at Portsmouth, N. H. It was expected that marriage would follow their intimacy, but both families opposed it on account of her incompatibility of temper; and at Doctor Elliott's request the acquaintance was broken. The spirit of Miss Livermore brooked no opposition, and vainly she strove to remove the prejudices of Doctor Elliott's family, even on her knees at his mother's feet. How much each suffered by the separation, and how far it affected their subsequent lives cannot be known.

Doctor Elliott soon after, near the close of the War of 1812, secured the appointment of surgeon in the United States army, and went south upon his duties. The entire night before his departure he paced his room, and showed the intensity of his feelings to those ancient walls alone. To the scenes that would stir olden memories he never returned; and at the hospital at Pensacola, Florida, he fell a victim to yellow fever Sept. 22, 1822, at the age of thirty-three. His remains were brought north about thirty years afterward, and interred in the Greenwood cemetery, at East Haverhill, near his old home. A plain stone marks the spot.

When news came of her lover's death in the distant Southland, with a spirit apparently of revenge, Miss Livermore said to his father, "If your family had not opposed our union, this bitter grief would have been spared them, for he would not have exiled himself thus and died among strangers." Her words were probably true, as it has been thought if they had married each other Doctor Elliott's gentle spirit would have subdued and softened her passionate nature. The separation gradually caused her to become moody and eccentric.

When Miss Livermore began to teach at East Haverhill, at the age of twenty-three, she professed conversion, and in 1818 joined the congregational church, though she had been in the Episcopal fellowship since she was fourteen. In 1825, she was transferred to the Baptist church, which she soon discarded. The poet Whittier says, "She was frequently at our house, and at one time had an idea of becoming a member of the Society of Friends, but an unlucky outburst of rage, resulting in a blow, at a Friend's house in Amesbury, did not encourage us to seek her membership. She was naturally religious, and I have no doubt tried hard to overcome her naturally passionate disposition."

When she taught school at East Haverhill, John G. Whittier was a boy of six or seven, and it is she that he describes in "Snow Bound," in that portion of the poem commencing,

"Another guest that winter night
Flashed back from lustrous eyes the light."

The very devout manner in which she taught her pupils to repeat the Lord's prayer and the one hundred and nineteenth psalm in concert was never forgotten by them. With closed eyes, and in a voice as soft and low as that of an angel she impressed the recitation upon them. But woe to the unfortunate scholar who incurred her displeasure. Her rage was so sudden and intense, and her blows so severe, the return to the next session was most dreaded. Because of her accomplishments and social position she was continued as teacher. She taught her girl pupils needle-work and embroidery of her own exquisite designs, and specimens of her and their work are still extant in the families of some of her scholars.

As early as 1824, Miss Livermore spoke publicly in the old schoolhouse in which she had taught at East Haverhill, and at Newton, N. H., and surrounding towns. In 1825, at the age of thirty-seven, she abandoned teaching, and entered upon her life work as an evangelist, assuming the name of "The Pilgrim Stranger." She spoke in schoolhouses, churches, and in any room she could obtain, or in the open air. At one time, in Philadelphia, she addressed a large number of sailors upon a wharf. She travelled by stage, private conveyance, or on foot. "Twice, for want of money," she wrote, "I walked until my feet were festered, and my whole frame entirely exhausted." She was pleasing as a speaker, and attracted large crowds. The late Governor Briggs said that she was the sweetest singer he ever knew, and that she could be distinctly heard by a thousand persons. Whittier, also, says, "She was quite earnest and eloquent."

When her father was in congress, Miss Livermore was with him in Washington, and entered into the society to which his position admitted her. In January, 1827, she addressed the assembled congress in the hall of representatives on religion, the president and secretary being present. She is said to have sung melodiously, her softest notes filling the vast room. Her preaching was also thought to have been eloquent and effective. She was the first woman that ever publicly spoke within the congressional halls. Subsequently she spoke there in three other administrations.

She was a firm Adventist, and hoped to die on Mt. Zion. This was because of her strange notion in regard to the fulfilment of the prophecy mentioned in Rev. xi. 3-13. She believed that she was to be one of the two witnesses who were to be slain in the Holy City, lie unburied in the streets three days and a half, and then stand on their feet alive, etc. With the realization of this prophecy in view she secretly visited Palestine, where she became known as the American "Mejunnah" and "the Yankee crazy woman." Subsequently she visited the Holy Land three times, spending in all sixteen years of her life in that region, in Egypt, and in various other foreign countries, crossing the Atlantic ten times.

At one time she climbed Mt. Libanus, and visited Lady Hester Stanhope, the famous "Queen of Lebanon," whom Miss Livermore resembled. Lady Hester pointed out to her from among her fine steeds two beautiful horses, saying, "One the Great King, when he come, will ride, and the other I will ride in company with Him." In response, Miss Livermore gave a most emphatic "No! The Great King will ride this horse, and it is I, as his bride, who will ride upon the other, at His second coming."

A Turk once offered her his arm as escort, which she refused with scorn, saying, "Christians have no dealings with the Turks."

In May, 1832, Miss Livermore went to the Far West, and spent a year, principally among the Indians at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, travelling six thousand miles, most of the distance through the wilderness. She wished to be of service to them, as she felt that they were of Israel, and would yet be restored to Jerusalem, and intended to spend her life among them, but as the Commissioners on Indian Affairs objected, her project had to be abandoned.

John G. Whittier says that in 1838, Miss Livermore staid at his boarding place in Philadelphia for several days, and he assisted her in securing an audience to a lecture on her foreign travels, which netted her about one hundred and fifty dollars.

Miss Livermore was also prominent as a writer, having published nearly a score of books, most of which were of a religious character. Among them were volumes of sermons and hymns which were at one time much used among the Dunkers in Pennsylvania. Her religious novel, entitled, "A Wreath from Jessamine Lawn," is fascinating, and many of her poems indicate genius.

She spent some time among the Dunkers, and was regarded by them as a gifted Christian minister. Her labors were blessed everywhere. Her first sermon in Philadelphia was delivered in a Dunkers' church, and it was the means of the conversion of Sarah Righter, who subsequently married Rev. Thomas Major, and for forty years preached the gospel.

On returning, in 1862, from her last voyage to Jerusalem, she was for several years supported by her relatives and friends, to whom she became so troublesome that, Nov. 13, 1867, her nephew placed her in the Blockley almshouse in West Philadelphia, where she died four months later, March 30, 1868, at the age of eighty. Property had been left for her in trust, but by unfortunate investments the trustee had lost it.

Miss Livermore's friend, Mrs. Margaret F. Worrell, caused her remains to be brought to her own home in Germantown, and, after a simple service by a few of the friends of other days, had them interred in her lot in the Dunkers' cemetery. The grave is unmarked, but neighbors point out the mound under which "The Pilgrim Stranger" awaits the coming of her King.

Her last days were marked by the same traits of character that had been prominent in her earlier years, but she had grown impatient with age. Her virtues, it is said, far exceeded her faults, and in spite of her eccentricities she accomplished much good in the service of her Master.

She was indeed a singular and remarkable woman, more pitiable than censurable. No one knows what fierce and unsuccessful struggles she had to overcome the violence of her peculiar disposition. A writer has said, "Half insane, half weird, and wholly wilful, a virago and a vixen in one person, she was, in a sense the poet never thought of,

'Commixture strange of heaven, earth, hell,' without the first of the three elements."

The frontispiece represents her face as she appeared in her prime.

SALEM.

"Rise, crown'd with Light, imperial SALEM rise."
POPE.

WHERE balmy Odours o'er the Meadows
fray'd,
And bending Willows form'd a quivering Shade;
Where the great Monarch of the woody Train,
Rear'd high his Head, and overlooked the Plain;
And where the Elm, in branching Pride display'd
The sacred Shelter of its rural Shade;
Imperial Salem stretches o'er the Land:
Her Sons, arise at Liberty's Command,
Superior shine, in peaceful Robes array'd,
And scorn the glittering Pomp of servile Pride,
By little Arts, malevolent to gain;
But bravely loyal, all their Rights maintain.

For me, I'll ne'er forget th' impartial Themes,
The friendly Lays, which honest Merit claims:
I'll haunt thy Fields, I'll sing thy flowery Plains,
And court the Friendship of thy generous Swains.
Thou blest'd of Heav'n, secure amidst the Jars,
Of civil Factions, and religious Wars;
O may no jealous Power --- thy Peace destroy,
Or shake the Basis of thy spreading Joy;
No envious Neighbour stain thy virtuous Name,
Or blast the Glory of thy rising Fame.

So when immortal Rome, by Trojans rear'd,
In towering Pomp, and Elegance appear'd;
Proud Carthage saw, grew jealous at the Sight,
Pour'd forth her Sons, and rous'd them to the Fight;
Each Breast was fir'd, each Hero fought his Arms,
And all was Fury, Terror, and Alarms.
But when the Genius of that sacred Throne,
Where Liberty divine triumphant thone,
With her own Brutus, at Philippi saw,
Exulting Vice subvert great Virtue's Law,
She fled, indignant, to Britannia's Plains,
There fix'd the Center of her wide Domains.
From thence the wing'd her Flight o'er Neptune's
Sway,
And as the radiant skim'd the watery Way,
In Murmurs whisper'd to the sighing Gale,
"Oh bear me far to Essex's fruitful Vale,
"There let my Sons the Pomp of Vice despise,
"There, crown'd with Light, imperial SALEM rise."

 ANSWERS.

165. Jonathan Wilson, who married Mary Beans, both of Salem, Sept. 17, 1766 (having been published about eleven months before) was evidently son of Isaac Wilson of Danvers (probably of that part of Danvers which is now Peabody), wheelwright, who died in the winter of 1802-3. Jonathan was a blacksmith and lived in Danvers in 1784. Jonathan Wilson of Windham, Cumberland county, husbandman, wife Mary, in 1796, is probably the same person as the above.—Ed.

170. The mention of "James Wales" in the Antiquarian, volume I, page 21, was probably intended by the scrivener who drew the deed for the possessive form of James Wall, who then lived in Hampton; and died in 1659. He had two wives, Mary being the name of the second; and two daughters by each wife, Elizabeth and Sarah by the first, and Mary and Hannah by the second.—Ed.

ANCIENT BURYING GROUND.

This old burying ground was used in the first settlement of the town, and remained the only cemetery until 1723, when the East parish (now the town of Groveland) burial ground was opened. The oldest stone now standing and decipherable bears date of 1681, being that of Mrs. Susannah Simes. The following are all the inscriptions that were there a few years ago bearing dates prior to 1800.

FROM PEGGY BLIGH'S VOYAGE.

Horseback over a blind, rough road,
 Or as part of a jolting wagon-load
 Of garden-produce or household goods,
 Crossing the fords, half lost in the woods,
 By wolves and red-skins frightened all day,
 And the roar of lions, some histories say.

Lucy Larcom.

EARLY HIGHWAYS.

The water was the original highway of our region. Roads were not constructed for some years after the first settlers came, and they had to be contented with Indian ways of conveyance. The forest was dense with few paths, and rivers, ponds and ocean remained unobstructed to water craft. For many years the better and favorite way to Boston and between settlements along the ocean and rivers was by water; and indeed it has remained an easy and favorite passage to a great extent to the present time.

Trails, marked by blazed trees, were the original land ways; and those wishing to go over land had to walk, for some years, dignitary and plebian alike. It took four days to make the trip between Salem and Boston, when Winthrop first came; and the next Sunday after the visit of a party to Boston there was posted in the meeting-house in Salem a vote of thanks for their safe guidance and return.

Until bridges were built streams had to be forded or a crossing effected by boat. This led to ferries being early established and bridges built. Carr's ferry, over the Merrimack river, at Carr's island, was authorized as early as 1639; and the town bridge at what is now known as Blubber Hollow on Boston street in Salem was built in 1640.

Horses were soon introduced and trails had to be made fit for bridle paths. In 1646 the town of Salem ordered to be made between the town and Jeffries Creek (now Manchester) "such a way as a man may travel on horseback or drive cattle."

Only one of the inventories of estates of deceased persons filed in this county before 1646 mentions horses. That is the inventory of the estate of Samuel Smith of Wenham (then called Enon), who died in 1642. It mentions a mare and colt. In the inventories of Robert Pease and John Talbey, both taken in 1644, and both being Salem estates, canoes are mentioned. In none of them is any other vehicle named.

The change from trails to bridle-paths only occasioned the removing of rocks and trees. Too many stumps and rocks remained to trip the unwary animal.

Later came sleds and wagons. Then bridle-paths had to be widened, and the surface of the ground put into better condition.

The early road ways, except in the principal streets of the villages, ran through private lands, not being bordered by fences, and the division fences and walls between the various lots ran across the roads, making necessary the maintenance of bars or gates at the roadways. Public highways encumbered by gates and bars have existed in this county until recent times.

During the winter season snow was neither removed nor trodden down, even in the large towns until near the close of the eighteenth century.

Paths and roads were first made to connect the scattered houses of the settlers, and therefore there were no direct roads between settlements for many years. With the straightening of these roads and the construction of direct highways most of the old roads have been abandoned; and our county is interlaced with obsolete ways. Many of these are now lanes, and more can be traced in pastures and woods. The parallel walls of stone, crooked and choked with barberry and bramble, sometimes arched with grand old elms, and ancient garden flowers and shrubs by half-filled cellars and wells show where some of the early highways traced their course.

BACON FAMILY.*

The name of BACON is also spelled in the early Essex county records Bakon and Beacon.

DANIEL BACON¹, son of Daniel Bacon of Woburn, was a ship-carpenter, and lived in Salem as early as 1664. He belonged to the church in Lynn until 1696, and probably lived there a while. He married Susannah Spencer Aug. 1, 1664; and she was his wife in 1719, being weak and enfeebled in body. He died in 1720; his will, dated Aug. 21, 1719, being proved June (July?) 20, 1720. In an affidavit made in 1716, when he was seventy-five years old, he says that he formerly lived in the Isle of Jersey.

Children, born in Salem:—

- 2—I. DANIEL², b. Oct. 14, 1665. See below (2).
- 3—II. ALICE², b. 28: 8: 1669; d. about seven weeks later.
- 4—III. SUSANNA², b. July 18, 1670; m. Benjamin Boyce before 1720.
- 5—IV. MARY², b. June 8, 1673; living in 1719.
- 6—V. MIGHILL (or, MICHAEL)², b. Oct. 23, 1676. See below (6).
- 7—VI. LYDIA², b. 23: 12: 1678-9; d. 25: 10: 1681.
- 8—VII. JOHN², b. 24: 11: 1680-1. See below (8).

2

DANIEL BACON², born in Salem Oct. 14, 1665. He was a ship-carpenter, and lived in Salem. He married widow Sarah Fruide (or, Grude) Sept. 12, 1688. She was living in 1721, and he as late as 1750. See Antiquarian, volume IV, page 19.

Children, born in Salem:—

- 9—I. DANIEL³, b. 3: 7 mo: 1690. See below (9).

*The frontispiece shows the coat-of-arms that has been in the possession of the Bradford Basons for about a century. The upper part of the shield is white and the lower part red. The stars are purple, and the dragons gold. It belonged to the late Mrs. Edward Poor of Georgetown, and is a water-color, measuring about nine by twelve inches. It is apparently the work of John Coles of Boston, an ancestor of Mrs. Poor having lived there toward the close of the eighteenth century.

- 10—II. SARAH², b. Feb. 12, 1691-2; baptized Feb. 11, 1727.
- 11—III. BENJAMIN², b. Aug. 4, 16—; baptized May 3, 1696.
- 12—IV. SUSANNAH², b. Sept. 19, 1694; d. July —, 1695.
- 13—V. SUSANNAH², b. June 26, 1696; m. George Felt, jr., of Salem March 26, 1713.
- 14—VI. ELIZABETH², b. March 19, 1698; m. John Devoreux Nov. 20, 1718.
- 15—VII. JOHN², b. July 2, 1700.
- 16—VIII. SPENCER², bapt. Feb. 22, 1701.

MIGHILL (or, MIAL, or MICHAEL) BACON², born in Salem Oct. 23, 1676. He was a shipwright, and lived in Salem. He married Margaret Shattuck; was a constable of Salem in 1714; and died between 1749 and 1768, when both were deceased.

Children, born in Salem:—

- 17—I. MICHAEL³, bapt. Sept. 30, 1705; perhaps d. young.

19

MIGHILL BACON³, baptized in Salem Feb. 27, 1708. He lived in Salem, having a ship-building yard with his brother Samuel. He married Mary Taylor of Salem May 24, 1733. He had a house near the burying-place in Salem, which he sold in 1750. She was his widow April 19, 1762, when she was appointed administratrix of his estate.

Children (their two sons were baptized in St. Peter's church in Salem June 15, 1740):—

- 34—I. TAYLOR⁴. See below (34).
- 35—II. ——— (son)⁴.

20

SAMUEL BACON³, baptized in Salem April 15, 1711. He lived in Salem, where he had a building-yard with his brother, Mighill Bacon, both being shipwrights. He married Elizabeth Bacon of Salem Sept. 26, 1734, and they were living in Salem in 1745.

Child:—

- 36—I. SAMUEL⁴. See below (36).

24

RETIRE BACON³, baptized in Salem April 17, 1720. He was a yeoman, and lived upon a farm in Boxford, having married Mary Hale of that town April 14, 1741. She died in 1762 or 1763, and in the latter year he sold the farm. He was then in Wenham a short time. He married, secondly, Margaret Burnham of Ipswich, in Rowley, Aug. 27, 1764; and lived in Ipswich the next year. In or before 1767 he settled in Peterborough-slip (or, Slip-town, as it was at first called), N. H., and both were living there in 1768.

Children:—

John Price, bound to Constable Trasler for appearance, being drunk. Attachment of person granted.

A PROPHECY.

DANVERS the Theme! Muses your Tribute bring!
What Muse, of Danvers, can refuse to sing.

Mutatis mutandis ----- WINDSOR FOREST.

WHERE smiling Ceres gilds the fruitful Fields;
And yellow Autumn rich Profusion yields;
Where hardy Peasants deck the gaudy Plains,
While British Vigour riots in their Veins;
Where the tir'd Cit enjoys his cool Retreats
From Salem's sultry Skies and sandy Streets;
Fair Danvers lies ----- torn from her Parent's
side,

Her Children's Boast, and fertile Effex' Pride.

Here in the Confinis of a humble Vale,
Fann'd by the Whispers of the Western Gale,
A hoary Patron of the furrow'd Earth,
Sprung from that Soil which gave his Fathers
Birth,

Enjoy'd a Shelter from the scorching Sun,
And in prophetic Numbers thus begun.

'Hail happy Seat! by Heav'n design'd to rise,
'And taste the Favours of th' indulgent Skies.
'That blissful Era dawns, and future Seers
'Shall mark its Progress thro' revolving Years;
'That Hour approaches, when thy neighb'ring
Woods

'Shall slowly sink beneath the rushing Floods:
'Where now the sportive Lambs are taught to feast,

'Leviathan shall heave the wat'ry Waste,
'Pleas'd with his new-found Seas; while by his Side,

'Thy pompous Navies swell th' expanding Tide:
'Thy Thunder thro' th' astonish'd World shall roar,

'And Afric's Spoils oppress thy crouded Shore.

'A Seat of Empire next shall be thine own,

'And suppliant Monarch's prostrate at thy Throne.

'The great Alexiowitz,* ordain'd by Fate
 'To bring to Light a rude, unpolish'd State,
 'Saw Petersburg erect its envy'd Head,
 'The Ruffian's Pride, and conquer'd Sweden's
 Dread,
 'Her Genius rising on that happy Day,
 'Wing'd thro' the blue Expanse his rapid Way,
 'And cry'd, --- "America shall own my Pow'rs,
 'And one small Villa rival Peter's Tow'rs."
 'Rife! scorn the Town to which Thou'rt now
 ally'd,
 'Strength of thy Strength, and Source of all thy Pride;
 'Yet fated soon to tremble at thy Frown,
 'And dread the Rage of thine affronted Crown.
 'From me thy dear Idea ne'er shall part,
 'While the warm Stream dilates a faithful Heart.
 'When rolling Time this glorious Change shall bring,
 'Each Muse, of Danvers, shall be proud to sing.

SALEM, MASS., MARCH, 1901.

No. 3.

PART OF SALEM IN 1700. NO. 6.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

THE frontispiece is a map of that section of Salem which is bounded by Flint, Broad, Essex and Jackson streets. It is based on actual surveys and title deeds, and is drawn on a scale of two hundred feet to an inch. It shows the location of all houses that were standing in 1700. The brace marked "a" shows where South Pine street begins; the braces marked "b" where Warren street runs; those marked "c" where Warren street court runs; and "d" where Jackson street runs. The letters "f" "f" show the present eastern side of the upper end of Essex street.

Essex street was first called a street as early as 1659; ye great street leading through the town, 1713; the main street, 1722; and Essex street, 1796. The upper end of Essex street was originally Brickkiln lane, which was called a lane in 1694; brickkiln lane, 1721; way leading into the great pasture, 1744; Northerly way leading into the great pasture, 1787. It was widened on the eastern side before 1805, probably when the turnpike was constructed, making it as at present. In 1804, the Salem turnpike was laid out from Brickkiln lane, and it finally came into the possession of the city, being called the Salem turnpike. Its name was changed to Highland avenue in 1875.

Flint street was first called a lane in 1694; a street, 1713; a lane or highway, 1721; lane from the main street to Marblehead, 1786; and Flint street, 1801.

Warren street was laid out by the owners of land over which it passed Dec. 19, 1804*, and has always been so called.

Pine street was laid out by the owners of land over which it passed, twenty-eight feet wide, Jan. 1, 1806,* and was known by that name, being latterly called South Pine street.

The only way to get into or out of the central part of Salem by land in the earliest days was by way of Broad street. It was a highway as far as shown on the map, the rest of the way running over common lands. Broad street itself was first called a highway in 1701; and Broad street, 1801. The private way was called Pasture street as early as 1797, and Broad street in 1831, the gate probably having been removed to a point near the present end of the street. The city accepted this part as a highway in 1870, and since then it has been a legal portion of Broad street.

Jackson street was laid out over the Great pasture lands for a highway, and accepted as such in 1877.

In the sketches that follow, after 1700, titles and deeds referred to pertain to the houses and land under and adjoining, but not always to the whole lot, the design being, after 1700, to give the history of the houses then standing principally.

The Common Pasture. This was common land of the proprietors or commoners from the first settlement. This part of the common lands became the estate of that portion of the proprietors who became incorporated as the Great Pasture corporation in 1724. The two projecting portions of the pasture shown on the map were the "pens," at the extremities of which were the gates that admitted the cattle. The one leading toward Essex street was the northern entrance, and the other, the southern. To these two gates the owners of cattle drove them in the morning and turned them over to the care of the cow-herd, and at night there received them at his hand. The northern entrance remained until some years after the turnpike was a highway, and was then sold, to individuals. The southern entrance was a private way as early as 1797, the gate having been removed to what is now the head of Broad street, and in 1870 it became a highway—an extension of Broad street.

Col. John Hathorne Farm. This farm was probably granted by the town to Maj. William Hathorne at a very early date (before 1635). A house was standing on the farm in 1646 and 1661, but was gone before the decease of Major Hathorne, which occurred in 1681. He devised the farm to his son, Col. John Hathorne, who died possessed of it May 10, 1717.

Benjamin and William Pickering House. This lot was early in the possession of Townsend Bishop. His agents, Robert Moulton and Michael Shafflyn, conveyed to Richard Adams "one ould howse wth one acre of land wthin the Comon feild and about an acre and an halfe of land next to the Comon inclosed by ytselfe," for three pounds, ten shillings, 27:3:1646*. On the same day, they also conveyed, for the same amount of money, "the new messuadge or dwelling house of the said m^r Bishope standing by the Rocks nere Captane Hathornes house," to Ralph Fogg of Salem.† The house had probably been erected the preceding year. This lot also came into the possession of Mr. Adams. He was of Salem, mason, April 30, 1679, when, for one hundred and fifty pounds, he conveyed to Lt. John Pickering of Salem, yeoman, this house (the old house being gone) and lot of four or five acres, consisting of pasture, mowing, orchard and garden, "at the western end of the town over against Major Hathorne's". Mr. Pickering died possessed of the lot and house May 5, 1694, having devised the estate to his sons Benjamin and William. They made a partition of the estate July 26, 1701, Benjamin having the western part of the house and lot and north leanto, and William, the eastern part.

Benjamin Pickering died possessed of the western half of the house and lot between 1701 and 1734, and at the latter date his widow Jane Pickering was living in his end of the house. She died possessed of it in 1749-50, having devised it to her son Joseph Pickering. Joseph lived in the house, and died in 1790, having devised the estate to his son William and his grandson Joseph Pickering (son of his deceased son Joseph). William Pickering was a mariner, living in Salem, and released his interest in the premises to his co-tenant, who was also a mariner of Salem, April 27, 1797.‡ Joseph conveyed the estate to William Pickering of Salem, mariner, June 26, 1828.§ William Pickering conveyed it to Samuel S. Williston of Salem, cabinet-maker, Jan. 21, 1830.¶ Mr. Williston lived in his part of the house, and mortgaged it to William Micklefield of Salem, to baconist, Dec. 12, 1831.|| By foreclosure it became the mortgagee's. Mr. Micklefield died possessed of his part of the house and lot Aug. 28, 1840; and the trustee under his will, together with Mr. Williston, conveyed the estate to Jeremiah Mahoney and Jeremiah L. Ford, both of Salem, curriers, July 27, 1844.‡ Mr. Ford released his interest in the premises to Mr. Mahoney Sept. 18, 1850.¶ Mr. Mahoney became insolvent, and his assignees conveyed it to Patrick Ganley of Salem Aug. 5, 1858. On the same day, Mr. Ganley reconveyed the estate to the

William Pickering died possessed of the eastern part of the house and lot, and his executrix conveyed it to his nephew, Edward Pickering (son of Benjamin Pickering who owned the other half) of Salem, mariner, Sept. 4, 1724.§ Edward Pickering lived there, and was a husbandman. He conveyed his portion of the house and lot to his brother William Pickering of Salem, cordwainer, Feb. 25, 1734.¶ William Pickering, then of Salem, shoreman, conveyed it to his brother Joseph Pickering of Salem, fisher-others of the heirs, conveyed it to John Looney of Salem July 11, 1864.*

So John Looney owned the eastern half, and William Looney the western half of the house when it was burned between two and three o'clock on the afternoon of Sept. 16, 1865. William Looney and his son-in-law Coakley were then living in his part, and the other half was occupied by the widow Wood and a Mr. Redmond and family. The walls, being lined with brick, remained standing until the following spring. The engraving of the house herewith given has been copied from the drawing made of it by John Robinson March 1, 1866, representing it as it appeared just before the fire.

Edward Flint and Thomas Flint Lots and David Flint House. These three lots were generally known, in the last quarter of the seventeenth century as Goldthwaite's and Putnam's lots. Thomas James of Salem, husbandman, owned one acre of this land, adjoining "to goodman Adams land near the brick kill," in 1652, when he conveyed it to William Flint.† Henry Kenney of Salem, husbandman, owned three acres of the southwestern end of the Edward Flint and Thomas Flint lots, with a dwelling house thereon, Feb. 28, 1659, when he conveyed the estate to William Flint of Salem,§ who already owned the remainder of the lots and the David Flint lot. William Flint died 2 : 2 : 1673, possessed of the lots, having devised them in his will to his sons Edward and Thomas. Dec. 3, 1694, they divided the premises, the Thomas Flint lot being assigned to Thomas, and the others to Edward Flint.|| Thomas Flint owned his lot until his decease, about 1719. Edward died possessed of his lot in 1711, having devised to his son David the lot "where his house stands." David was married in January, 1700, and he probably built his house on this corner about that time. He was a fellmonger, and died in 1736, possessed of the estate. His executors conveyed the western half of the "mansion house" and lot to James Odell of Salem, shoreman, July 9, 1739.* Mr. Odell died, and the estate descended to his son James, who conveyed it to Stephen Fogg of Salem, trader, June 21, 1826.†

The eastern half of the house and lot were conveyed by the executors of David Flint to Thomas Metcalf of Salem, fisherman, the deceased's son-in-law, June 15, 1739.§ Mr. Metcalf died in 1749, and after the decease of his widow Ruth, in 1766, it descended to their only son Joseph. July 27, 1786, Joseph Metcalf conveyed his part of the house and lot to Jeduthun Upton of Salem, merchant.|| Mr. Upton conveyed one-half of his interest to Dudley Porter, jr., of Haverhill, merchant, Jan. 24, 1807.‡ Mr. Upton and Mr. Porter conveyed their part of the house and lot to John and Nathaniel Sleeper, both of Salem, laborers, June 25, 1807.¶ The Sleepers conveyed the estate to Peter E. Webster and John Hale, both of Salem, traders, July 26, 1815; and Mr. Hale conveyed his interest in the property to Stephen Fogg Aug. 28, 1815.†† Mr. Webster released his interest to Mr. Fogg Jan. 12, 1818. §§

Thus Mr. Fogg came into possession of the entire house and lot. The ancient house had been occupied as a dwelling and a grocery, the business having been carried on from about 1806 to about 1810 by the Sleepers, who owned the eastern part. They did a large business in West India and other foreign goods. Crowds of teams came to this store from New Hampshire and Vermont with country produce, which they exchanged for other commodities.

Mr. Fogg took the old house down in 1826, and erected the present brick store, adding the residence portion fourteen years later. He continued the trade many years, and died April 25, 1859.*

BADCOCK FAMILY.

This name was sometimes speiled Babcock in early Essex county records, and is now generally so spelled.

SOME ESSEX COUNTY INDIANS.

ANDREW, known also by the name of Pooky John, lived in the vicinity of Amesbury upon the Merrimac in 1677. He belonged to a small party of about twenty, who made daily inroads upon the inhabitants of that quarter.†

BLACK-WILLIAM, called also Manatahqua, was sachem of Saugus, now Lynn, and vicinity about 1630. His family lived in Swampscott, and was also a sagamore, but probably was dead before the English came.* William Wood, the traveller, in 1633, in his New England Prospect, thus notices William as possessing Nahant: "One Black-william, an Indian Duke, out of his generosity gave this place in general to the plantation of Saugus, so that no other can appropriate it to himself." He was a great friend to the whites, but his friendship was repaid, as was that of many others of that and even later times. There was a man by the name of Walter Bagnall, "a wicked fellow," who had much wronged the Indians,§ and was killed near the mouth of the Saco river, probably by some of those whom he had defrauded. This was in October, 1631. As some vessels were upon the eastern coast in search of pirates, in January, 1633, they put in at Richman's island, where they fell in with Black-William. This was the place where Bagnall had been killed about two years before, but whether he had anything to do with it does not appear, and even his murderers did not pretend that he was in any way implicated, but out of revenge for Bagnall's death, they hanged Black-William.§ On the contrary it was particularly mentioned|| that Bagnall was killed by Squidrayset and his men, some Indians belonging to that part of the country. It is believed that this chief married a daughter of Passaconaway.*

JAMES, sagamore of Saugus, now Lynn, whose native name was Montowampate,† was brother of John, sagamore of Winisimet. He died in 1633, of the smallpox, "with most of his people. It is said that these two promised if ever they recovered to live with the English, and serve their God."§ The histories of those times give a melancholy picture of the distresses caused by the smallpox among the "wretched natives." "There are," says Mather, "some old planters surviving to this day, who helped to bury the dead Indians; even whole families of them were all dead at once. In one of the wigwams they found a poor infant sucking at the breast of the dead mother."|| The same author observes that before the disease began, the Indians had begun to quarrel with the English about the bounds of their lands, "but God ended the controversy by sending the smallpox among the Indians at Saugus, who were before that time exceedingly numerous."‡

MASCONOMO, sachem of Agawam, since called Cape Ann. When the fleet which brought over the colony that settled Boston, in 1630, anchored near there he welcomed them to his shores, and spent some time on board one of the ships.¶ We hear no more of him until 1643, when, at the court held in Boston, "Cut-shamekin and Squaw-sachem, Masconomo, Nashacowam and Wassamagin, two sachems near the great hill to the west called Wachusett, came into the court, and according to their former tender to the governor desired to be received under our protection and government upon the same terms that Pumham and Sacanonoco were. So we caused them to understand the articles, and all the ten commandments of God, and they freely assenting to all, they were solemnly received, and then presented the court with twenty-six fathom of wampum, and the court gave each of them a coat of two yards of cloth, and their dinner and to them and their men every one of them a cup of sac at their departure, so they took leave and went away very joyful.* Agawam, in Ipswich, was his place of residence, and his remains were interred on Sagamore hill in what is now the town of Hamilton. His squaw survived him for some time, having a piece of land that she could not dispose of, or that none were allowed to purchase.†

who departed this life
July 27th 1796
Ætat. 66.

Likewise the Remains of
Mrs. PRISCILLA GAGE,
Consort of Maj. Benjamin Gage
who lived but one day after her husband
Ætat. 67.

They were lovely and pleasant in their lives
And in their death they were not divided.

Sic exeunt omnes.

*That friendship which unite the pair,
That love, which sooths each anxious care,
Must cease, when death dissolves the chain,
And marriage vows no more remain;
The husband and the wife must die,
And both together silent lie;
Till the last trumpets joyful sound,
Awake the dust beneath the ground.
May but that love our souls inspire
Which warms our hearts with heavenly fire;
Then may we quit this mortal strife,
And sweetly languish into life.*

*Unkind disease, to vail that rosy face,
Her smiles could all my pains controul,
Her Soul was made of tendernefs, her tongue
Was soft and gentle as her soul,
But peace my sorrows nor with murmuring
Dare to accuse heavens high decree
Methinks she was first ripe for everlastin.

ANSWERS.

154. James Bailey, son of John and Sarah (Butler) Bailey of Newbury, was born there May 12, 1722. His father died in 1747, having bequeathed to James land in Falmouth. James was a cordwainer by trade, and was apparently the James Bailey that removed to Fal-mouth after 1766, when he was living in Newbury. James Bailey, son of James and Hannah (Wood) Bailey, born in Bradford Feb. 11, 1721-2, lived in New Gloucester, Maine, in 1769.—Ed.

320. Mary, wife of Capt. Thomas Woodbridge, was daughter of Thomas Jones. This is proved by the will of her brother John Jones dated July 17, 1676.—Annie H. Knight, Newburyport.

321. Elizabeth, daughter of Elisha and Grace (Shaw) Davis, born Feb. 29, 1699, married Caleb Dalton, and had a daughter Mary. Elizabeth's sister Abi-gail lived in Kingston, and had children. Her sister Esther married Robert Ford. Her sister Mrs. Wilson had a son Jessie Wilson.—E. A. Kimball, East Haverhill.

THE OLD SHOEMAKER'S SHOP.

THE SHOEMAKERS.

Rap, rap! upon the well-worn stone,
 How falls the polished hammer!
 Rap, rap! the measured sound has grown
 A quick and merry clamor.
 Now shape the sole! now deftly curl
 The glossy vamp around it,
 And bless the while the bright-eyed girl
 Whose gentle fingers bound it!

Rap, rap!—your stout and bluff brogan,
 With footsteps slow and weary,
 May wander where the sky's blue span
 Shuts down upon the prairie.
 On Beauty's foot your slippers glance,
 By Saratoga's fountains,
 Or twinkle down the summer dance
 Beneath the Crystal Mountains?

John G. Whittier.

SHOEMAKING.

Shoemakers began to ply their trade in this county in its first settlement. They were generally called cordwainers or cordwinders, though those terms are not sufficiently descriptive of their occupation, as a cordwainer was one who sewed leather, but included the making of breeches and other articles of clothing made of leather.

The journeymen shoemakers, and most of them were journeymen in the early days, travelled from house to house, and from village to village, and stopped in a family long enough to make up a year's supply of footwear. His habits were similar to those of the weaver and tailor, and he worked in the house and boarded with the family while he remained.

From the hide of the cow or ox that the farmer had killed for a supply of beef, which had been turned into leather by the tanner, the shoemaker shod the family, fitting the boots and shoes to each foot. Sizes, we dare say, were unknown in those earlier days.

About the middle of the eighteenth century many of the farmers, from sides of leather tanned from the hides of their own animals, and from leather they had purchased, spent their dull winters in making shoes, the wives and daughters doing the binding and closing, and the sons helping with the sewing and in pegging after pegs began to be used. Some worked by the fireplace in the living room of the house, but generally a small building was built near the house in which the men worked. These little shops were scattered all through Essex county, and some are still to be seen in the country. The outside view of one of these shops, and they were nearly all of the same size

Later, some of the men in towns became manufacturers. That is, they had a shop in which they stored their hides and stock and the manufactured goods. There they cut the stock,—soles, vamps, quarters, counters, tongues, lifts, welts and rands: but the boots and shoes were made in other places. The makers came and took away the stock, returning the finished goods, being paid for their labor by the pair. It is said that the first shop of this kind was in Danvers, and style, is shown on the preceding page. They measured about ten by twelve feet. The inside view is given in the accompanying engraving. The neighbors frequently dropped in, and discussions in politics and all current topics often became animated. Gossip found here its readiest promoters.

When the winter's work was done, or the leather was all made up, the farmer carried his shoes to some trade centre and sold or bartered them.

being that of Zerubbabel Porter. His business was established in 1786, and he made heavy brogans for the wear of Southern slaves. The frontispiece is a view of this shop.*

About 1812, pegs, and a score of years later the pegging machine, were invented, and then the workmen were consolidated. Gangs did the work. Instead of one man making the whole of each shoe, each man did a part only, one lasting, another pegging, and so on. The small shops were gradually abandoned, and the work was done, from the cutting of the stock to the packing for the market, in one place. Eventually the business congregated, forming such shoe centres as Haverhill and Lynn.

Lynn has been noted for its shoes since its early days, no other town in the county showing so many men of this trade, according to the county records. The earliest shoemakers there were Philip Kertland and Edmund Bridges, who came as early as 1635. In 1767 eighty thousand pairs of shoes were made there, and in 1770 Lynn-made shoes were advertised in London.

The journeyman shoemaker of the early day, and the later shoe shop, which had more to do in shaping the affairs of the region than we know, long since became a matter of history only.

ANSWERS.

163. I have lately come into possession of an old Bible belonging to my great-great-grandfather, Joseph Lamson of Exeter, N. H., and in the family record contained in it is this: "On April 29th 1769, was married Joseph Lamson, only son of Joseph Lamson of Exeter, weaver, to Rachael Sanborn, Daughter of Capt Caleb Sanborn of hampton falls, Joyner. This Joseph Lamson, sr., married Pernal Giddings, daughter of Zebulon and Deborah (Webster) Giddings of Exeter, N. H., Sept. 7, 1747. Whose son was this Joseph Lamson, sr.? His will is dated Exeter, March 24, 1802, and probated May 4, 1802.—A. H. Lamson, Elkins, N. H.

193. Samuel Cook of Salem had a daughter Mary baptized there April 18, 1708. She may have been the wife of Jasper Needham.—Ed.

194. Deborah, wife of Jeremiah Meacham, was the ninth child of John Brown, born 1631, married Esther Makepeace of Boston April 24, 1655. Deborah was born in 1673. Mr. Brown's will dated at Watertown Nov. 20, 1697, says that he was late of Falmouth, and mentions wife Hester, daughter Deborah Meacham, etc.—Ed.

CAPT. VALENTINE BAGLEY⁶, born in Newbury Jan. 17, 1773. He lived in Amesbury, and was a sea captain, being the subject of Whittier's poem, entitled "The Captain's Well." He dug the famous "Captain's Well" in 1796. He was a charter member of the Warren Lodge of Free Masons in Amesbury, in 1822, and its first treasurer. The frontispiece of this number is a reproduction of the portrait of Captain Bagley, which was painted in England in 1807, when he was thirty-four years old, and which hangs in the hall of the Warren Lodge. He mar-died Hannah Currier July 24, 1796; and died Jan. 19, 1839.

THE OLD TOWN PUMP.

Take not away the old town pump,
 But bid it adorn the place where it stands!
 A graceful structure instead of a stump
 Of an upright post with its awkward hands.
 Take not away the old town pump.

We should miss the picture it gives the street,
 The oxen, the horses, the loads of hay,
 The "give me to drink," the friends that greet,
 The weary travellers, the children at play.
 Take not away the old town pump.

Lydia L. A. Very.

THE TOWN PUMP.

The old public pumps of Salem were located on the principal thoroughfares, and, like sentinels, stood at their respective posts of duty through summer and winter, in sunshine and storm, ever extending their long arms ready to receive the hand of each and every person passing that way who might wish for refreshment from their cool fountains. The march of improvement many years ago removed them, and only the citizens on the downward incline of life remember how they looked.

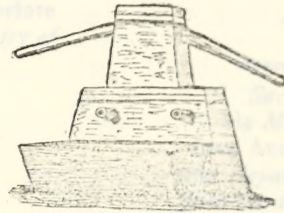

The town undoubtedly furnished drinking places for horses and cattle very early in its history; but probably provided no means for travellers and citizens to slake their thirst at a public pump until after the Revolution. "The town pump" is first mentioned, as far as the investigations of the writer have revealed, in 1788, and was situated in the middle of the upper end of what is now Summer street, in front of the "Witchhouse." In that year, the land on the western corner of Summer and Essex streets was described as lying near "the town pump."

This pump was located where it would be passed by nearly every team entering and leaving the town, the only exceptions being the teams that might pass from North through Lynde street (that part of Federal street formerly known as Marlborough street, and that part of Bridge street back of the court houses not being in existence), and those coming from Marblehead and passing down Mill and Norman streets, instead of Summer street.

Beverly bridge was not then constructed, and Beverly teams came by way of Danversport through North street. The travel from the west came down Essex street; and Summer street was the great road to Marblehead.

From the time of the Revolution for more than half a century the travel past this pump of heavy teams from New Hampshire and Vermont towns was enormous. They carried the foreign commodities from the warehouses here to the stores of those states, where they were sold to the consumers. Teams rarely passed, coming or going, without testing the quality of the water provided for them.

In 1806, was established a wood market on the south side of Essex street, westerly from Summer, a hay market on the westerly side of Summer street, and stands for dealers in country produce on the south side of Essex street next easterly of this pump. Thus it was, in 1806 and later, in the middle of the market of wood, hay and country produce.

The above cut is a copy of a drawing of this old pump made by E. A. Cabot in 1841. A few years later it was removed and a modern round, upright pump put in its place.

ANTRUM NOTE.

Thomas Antrum¹ (also spelled in Essex county records Antram, Antrim, Anthrop and Antrop) came from Southampton, England in the ship James, arriving in Boston June 3, 1635, and being called in the ship's clearance, a weaver, of Salisbury, Wiltshire. He settled in Salem, being granted land there in 1636, and he purchased of his "brother" Edmund Batter of Salem a farm in Brooksby in 1653. He probably married Jane, a sister of Edmund Batter, in or before 1637, as Thomas and Jane Antrum were members of the Salem church in 1637. He was made a freeman May 18, 1642; and died in 1663, his will being dated 24: 11: 1662, and proved 3: 5 mo. 1663. Children: 1. *Hannah*², married Isaac Burnap 8: 9 mo: 1658. 2. *Obadiah*², baptized June 7, 1640; married Martha Baker of Ipswich; lived in Salem; mariner; and was lost at sea on a voyage to Nevis or some other West India island in 1664. He called Edmund Batter "uncle." His widow returned to Ipswich; and married, secondly, Thomas Andrews of Rowley Village (Boxford) June 22, 1670. 3. *Mary*², baptized July 16, 1643; probably died before 1663. 4. *John*², baptized March 29, 1646; probably died before 1663.—Salem town records, Registry of deeds, Savage, etc.

BAILEY-BAYLEY GENEALOGY.

THE name of BAILEY is also spelled in the early Essex county records Baily, Bale, Baley, Balie, Balley, Ballie, Bally, Bayley, Baylies, Bayly, Baylye, and Baylyes. The two common spellings of the name are Bailey and Bayley, and one was as often used as the other.

There have been three large families of Baileys in this county, their ancestral immigrants being John Bailey of Salisbury and James and Richard Bailey of Rowley, the latter two being brothers. John's descendants will constitute an article by itself, but the others will be treated together in this article.

Neither the father nor mother of James and Richard are known:—

- 2—1. JAMES², b. about 1612. See below (2).
3—II. RICHARD², b. about 1619. See below (3).

2

JAMES BAILEY², born about 1612, was living in Rowley as early as 1641, and had land laid out to him soon after. He married Lydia —; and died in Rowley Aug. —, 1677, being buried on the 10th. His estate was appraised at £586. His wife survived him, and died, his widow, in Rowley. Her death is recorded on the church records in the following words: "The widow aged good Sister Bayly, Alass! died April 29, 1704."

Children, born in Rowley:—*

PASSACONAWAY.

Passaconaway was the great sachem of the country upon the Merrimack river and, at this distant day, it is impossible to fix the bounds of his dominions. Nashua and Pennacook were included therein, although there might have been many subordinate sagamores within the same limits. There was, in Philip's war, a sagamore Sam, of Nashua, and many others might be named in different parts.

Passaconaway "lived to a very great age, for," says a manuscript, "I saw him alive at Pawtucket, when he was about a hundred and twenty years old."* Before his death he delivered the following speech to his children and friends: "I am now going the way of all flesh, or ready to die, and not likely to see you ever meet together any more. I will now leave this word of counsel with you, that you may take heed how you quarrel with the English, for though you may do them much mischief, yet as surely you will all be destroyed and rooted off the earth if you do; for, said he, I was as much an enemy to the English, at their first coming into these parts, as any one whatsoever, and did try all ways and means possible to have destroyed them, at least to have prevented them from settling down here, but I could not effect it; therefore, I advise you never to contend with the English, nor make war with them." And Mr. Hubbard adds, "It is to be noted that this Passaconaway was the most noted powow and sorcerer of all the country."

His eldest son, Wonnalansit, succeeded him in authority, upon his decease, about the year 1660. He was also a friend of the English, and when he could live no longer in their neighborhood without endangering the peace of his people, in the time of Philip's war, he retired with them far into the wilderness toward Canada. Captain Mosely was sent up to his place of residence, a little before he abandoned it, with one hundred armed men, who laid waste his wigwams and winter's provisions, and yet was suffered to march off unmolested, although Mosely's men passed sufficiently near Wonnalansit's warriors, who had secreted themselves, to have been nearly all cut off by them; but the old chief would not suffer them to fire, although he restrained them with difficulty. Like Massasoit and Powhatan, he had many places of residence; one of the principal ones being Naamkok, since called Amoskeag.*

A story of the marriage of a daughter of Passaconaway, in 1662, is thus related. Manataqua, sachem of Saugus, made known his wishes to the chief of Pennacook, that he desired to marry his daughter, which being agreeable to all parties, was soon consummated at the residence of Passaconaway, and the hilarity was closed with a great feast. According to the usages of the chiefs, Passaconaway ordered a select number of his men to accompany the newly married couple to the dwelling of the husband. When they had arrived there, several days of feasting followed, for the entertainment of his friends, who could not be present at the consummation at the bride's father's, as well as for the escort; who, when this was ended, returned to Pennacook.

Some time after, the wife of Manataqua expressed a desire to visit her father's house and friends, and was permitted to go, a choice company conducting her. When she wished to return to her husband, her father, instead of conveying her as before, sent for the young sachem to come and take her away. He took this in high dudgeon, and sent his father-in-law this answer: "When she departed from me I caused my men to escort her to your dwelling, as became a chief. She now having an intention to return to me, I did expect the same." The elder sachem was now in his turn angry, and returned an answer which only increased the difference; and it is believed that this terminated the connection of the new husband and wife.*

TIMOTHY FULLER.

Mr. HALL, By giving the following a Place in your next Paper, you will very much oblige one of your constant Readers, and shew your Charity to the Publick.

THE Publick are desired to be on their Guard, as the famous T----y F----r, of Middleton, has lately taken up his Bonds, and seems as fully intent on Mischief as ever, that they may shun his Company and Conversation, both of which are offensive to all sensible People of good Character, that are knowing to the Man and his Communications.

And as the Publick were never favoured with a Sight of his Indictment, I should be glad you would give that also a Place in your next, an attested Copy of which I send you herewith.

TOPSFIELD IN 1800.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

ON page 99 is given a map of the village of Topsfield as it was in 1800. It is based on actual surveys and title deeds, and is drawn on a scale of forty-five rods or seven hundred and fifty feet to an inch. It shows the location of all houses that were standing within the territory included in the map in 1800.

The main street was a highway probably before 1668, as, March 16, 1668-9, Haverhill street (from "Todd's corner") was laid out "from Topfield meeting house, along vnder the North East Syde of the Hill called bare Hill, along as the trees are marked, over the brooke by Ephraim Dormans Houfe, and so along the plaine, called the Pine plaine, trees being marked, the end of Baker's Pond, and over the brooke at the pond end, by William Pritchetts houfe as the trees are marked, vnto the high way y^e comes betweene Andover and Ipswich and so along that High way."* In 1669, also, was laid out the Boxford road from Endecott's farm on the north side of Ipswich river in Boxford, past Kinsman's corner, on the north side of the common, over the older road to the meeting house in the burying ground.† Until 1663, the meeting house stood near the "dry bridge," and the old road in the rear of the Methodist church was the way to it from this neighborhood and Boxford.

In the sketches that follow, titles and deeds referred to pertain to the houses and land under and adjoining them, and not always to the whole lot, the design being to give the history of the houses standing in 1800 principally.

The Burying Ground. This burying ground is quite old, though the oldest stone remaining there, which bears an intelligible date, is marked "1717." In 1663, the meeting house was removed from the spot it had occupied for a number of years, near the "dry bridge," into the southeastern corner of this burial place, which was then very small. It may be that the opening of the cemetery dates from the time the meeting house was removed thither, the English custom of interring the dead around the church being followed.

In 1672, the Villagers (the Boxford settlers) built a sabbath-day house and a stable; and the next year, as a precaution against the Indians, a stone wall, five or six feet high and three feet broad at the bottom, was built around the meeting house. On the south side the wall was twelve feet, and on the other three sides ten feet from the building. Within this wall, at the southeast corner, a watch-house, ten feet square, was built, and this was called, in the beginning of the eighteenth century, the "Old meeting house fort."

This old meeting house stood here until 1703, when a new one was built on the site of the present Congregational church on the common, and the old one was sold for five pounds to John Gould, who moved it down to the turnpike, using it for a barn.

Polly Archer, Samuel Archer and Samuel Archer, jr., refused administration.—Probate records, Registry of deeds, and Wenham town records.

From the following paper, found in the Essex court files, it appears that the eldest child of Corp. has remained in the possession of Mr. Balch and his family ever since.

Capen House. This house was built on land granted by the town to Rev. Joseph Capen, and laid out to him Feb. 28, 1682-3. The lot contained twelve acres; and the house was probably built soon afterward. Here Mr. Capen subsequently lived. He died July 30, 1725, and the house and land descended to his children, becoming the property of his son Nathaniel, who conveyed the "old house" and land around it to John Baker of Boxford, yeoman, March 17, 1746.* Mr. Baker conveyed the estate to Edmund Putnam of Danvers Feb. 24, 1753.† Mr. Putnam came here and lived until he conveyed the house and lot to Rev. John Emerson of Topsfield May 10, 1758.‡ Mr. Emerson died in 1774; and in his will devised his real estate to his son Thomas Emerson, who died in 1813, having devised this estate to his son Joseph Emerson. He says in his will, which was made nearly two years before he died, "I am preparing to build a house and barn on this lot for my said son Joseph." Joseph Emerson died June 17, 1826, and the estate descended to his daughter, Harriet J., who became the wife of the late Charles H. Holmes, esq., in whose family and estate the title has since remained. A view of the ancient house is given in the frontispiece.

Averill House. This house stood some distance north of the residence of the late Charles H. Holmes. The site was a part of the homestead of Rev. Joseph Capen, and was conveyed by his son Nathaniel Capen of Topsfield, joiner, to Nathaniel Moulton of Ipswich, cordwainer, Sept. 27, 1737.§ He probably built the house that afterwards stood there the next year; and, Oct. 31, 1741, when he was of Andover, he conveyed the land and buildings to Francis Simons of Topsfield, weaver.* Mr. Simons conveyed the house and lot to Nathaniel Fuller, jr., of Ipswich, tailor, March 3, 1741-2.† Mr. Fuller removed to Groton, and sold the estate to Ruth Somes, widow of Ebenezer Somes, late of Gloucester, then of Topsfield, Dec. 9, 1743.‡ Isaac Fitts married Mrs. Somes, and lived in Danvers. June 3, 1752, they conveyed the house and lot to Jacob Averill, jr., of Topsfield, joiner.§ The place remained in the Averill family until about 1805, when it was conveyed to Thomas Emerson, who probably took the house down about 1812.

1843, when the present one was completed. The old one was carried to Salem, and has done useful service as a tannery on Boston street for fifty years.

School House. The school house, in which was kept the Middle school in 1800, stood where the town hall stands. It was built in 1790 or 1791, and was used as a school house until 1867, when the academy building came into the use of the public schools.

Jacob Kimball House. Rev. John Emerson sold this lot to Isaac Fitts in 1749; and the latter's widow, Ruth Fitts of

JACOB KIMBALL HOUSE.

The Common. This was the training field of the early days, and is mentioned as such from 1731 to 1811.

The Meeting House. The first meeting house to occupy this site was erected in 1703. This was a small hill, which was then cut down to make it convenient for the location of the meeting house, which was forty-four feet long and forty-two wide. The pulpit and some of the timbers of the old meeting house were used in the construction of the new. In 1760, it was superseded by another on the same site. This also passed away in

Danvers, conveyed it to Jacob Kimball, jr., blacksmith, Oct. 28, 1755.* Mr. Kimball built the present house thereon. May 12, 1803, he conveyed one-half of the house and lot to his son Benjamin Kimball, of Topsfield, blacksmith;† and Benjamin conveyed it to Moses Wildes, jr., of Topsfield, blacksmith, March 5, 1808.‡ The father died in 1812; and his son Jacob Kimball, esq., conveyed the remaining half-interest to Mr. Wildes April 3, 1813.§ The place has remained in the Wildes family ever since. The son Jacob Kimball, born in this house in 1761, graduated at Harvard college in 1780. He practised law at Amherst, N. H., and was noted as a composer of music, being the author of the "Rural Harmony," published in 1793. The blacksmith's shop of the Kimballs and Wildes stood on the opposite side of the road from the house. The house is shown in the accompanying engraving.

Samuel Hood House. This was the site of the tavern of Daniel and Dan Clark, and probably the same house that had stood here more than a century. It was the property of Daniel Clark in 1698, of Dan Clark in 1755, and of Daniel Clark in 1765. Daniel Clark of Topsfield, May 2, 1821.* Mr. Rea conducted a tavern here until the buildings were entirely burned by an incendiary on the night of Oct. 16, 1836.

Thomas Perkins House. This was the house of Zaccheus Perkins in 1713, and became his son Thomas Perkins' before 1731. The latter was a blacksmith, and died in 1786, having devised his real estate to his son Thomas, who was also a blacksmith. Thomas conveyed this house and lot to Samuel Hood of Topsfield, housewright, July 2, 1810.† Mr. Hood sold the buildings and land to Edmund Parker of Topsfield and John H. field, gentleman, conveyed the estate to Thomas Porter of Topsfield, gentleman, April 10, 1781;* and removed to the West Parish of Rowley (now the town of Georgetown), living where the late residence of T. G. Elliot stands. Mr. Porter conveyed the place to Rev. Daniel Breck, then pastor of the church here, May 10, 1781.† Mr. Breck conveyed the house and lot to Samuel Hood of Topsfield, housewright, May 3, 1786.‡ Mr. Hood lived here, and conveyed the house, barn and land to John Rea, 3d, of Topsfield, conveyed the same to William Hubbard and Zaccheus Gould, jr., of Topsfield April 13, 1812.§ Mr. Hubbard retained title to the estate until a few years ago. A picture of the house appears above.

John Baker (Cellar) Lot. Zaccheus Perkins of Topsfield, yeoman, conveyed this lot to Thomas Goodale of Topsfield, joiner, Nov. 22, 1713.¶ Mr. Goodale mortgaged it, with a house thereon, in 1718.¶ Administration on his estate was granted to his widow Phebe Goodale Nov. 7, 1720. In the inventory of his estate his land and buildings were subject to a mortgage. The mortgage executed in 1718 was discharged in 1721; and the house, standing in 1724, was gone before 1761. Perhaps this house was removed to the John Baker lot north, to be the ell of the J. Porter Gould house about 1800.

Nehemiah Cleaveland House. This house was probably the same that Jacob Robinson of Topsfield died possessed of in 1730. It was next owned by his son Jacob Robinson, who conveyed the estate to Elijah Porter of Topsfield March 28, 1761.* Mr. Porter became involved, and the estate passed into the hands of Nehemiah Cleaveland about 1795. He took down the old house many years after, and in its place erected the present house, which is now the Children's Home.

David Balch House. This lot was apparently a part of the estate of Jacob Robinson of Topsfield, who died in 1730. In the inventory of his estate is mentioned "timber for a dwelling house and about eleven hundred of slit work and eight or nine hundred of pine board." These were probably the materials of which this house was constructed soon after Mr. Robinson's death by his son John, to whom this lot had been released by the heirs. John Robinson lived in Topsfield, being a husbandman, and conveyed this estate to David Balch of Topsfield, yeoman, April 26, 1734.† He removed to Nottingham-west, N. H. Mr. Balch died in 1769, having devised the estate to his son David. David Balch, jr., was a tanner, and died in 1787, having devised his real estate to his sons David, Thomas and Joshua. The tanyard was across the road. The estate came into the hands of David, who died in 1812, and from him its title descended to his son Abraham, who lived upon it and died possessed of it a few years ago.

The house has since been transformed into a barn. The house was one of the ancient leanto houses, similar in design to the Thomas Perkins house shown above.

WILL OF GEORGE BURRILL, SR.

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN BAILEY OF SALISBURY.

JOHN BAILEY¹ of Salisbury was a weaver, and is said to have come from Chippenham, Wiltshire, England, in the ship Angel Gabriel, having sailed from Bristol in April, 1635. He was cast away at Pemaquid (now Bristol, Me.) in the great storm of Aug. 15, 1635. His wife did not come, and his son John was the only one of his children that came. He was living in Salisbury in 1640, and removed to Newbury in the spring of 1651. In Newbury he was a yeoman; and he died there Nov. 2, 1651, being called "Old John Bailey." In his will he mentions "my brother John Emery, jr., of Newbury, overseer;" and devised his homestead in Salisbury to his son John.

Children, born in England:—

- 2—I. JOHN², b. about 1613. See below (2).
- 3—II. ROBERT², living in England in 1651.

JEFFREY ESTE.

Jeffrey Este was in Salem as early as 1636, and left there about 1651, settling in Long Island. The following copy of his will (copied from the town records of Huntington, Suffolk county, Long Island, volume I, page 7, by Orville B. Ackerly of New York City) proves that Isaac Estey of Topsfield, whom wife Mary (Towne) Esty suffered for witchcraft at Salem, Sept. 22, 1692, was his son. It seems that Catherine was the name of the daughter that married Henry Scudder of Huntington.

"Jefery Este deceased the 4th of January 57 haveing mad his will and desposed of his estat as follueth: 1 he gave to his son Isak Easte sholled have A bedd and all that thar unto belonging. 2 20 shillings in shewes of if henry skodar so can to his dafter. 3 he bequeathed his house and lote to Jonathn Skodar the son of henary Skodar and his father to be his gardenar till his son com the age of 21 yeres and the rest of his estat to henary skodar of huntington. I henary Skodar being exetar in the presunc of thes witenes the 23 of Jenuary 59 (7?)."

ANSWERS.

204. The church records of Georgetown (formerly the West parish of Rowley) give the following: William Searl was a founder of the church Oct. 4, 1732, and was chosen deacon Nov. 29, 1732. Jane Searl, daughter of Deacon Searl was baptized Nov. 1, 1741. Jane Searl, jr., was admitted March 21, 1741-2. Jane Searl, now wife of Dea. Jeremiah Jewett, dismissed to First church in Rowley Dec. 3, 1769. She died in Rowley July 18, 1815, aged eighty-eight.—Ed.

307. Abigail Johnson, daughter of Stephen Johnson, a farmer of North Andover, was baptized in West parish, Boxford, Feb. 25, 1759. Her mother was Mary —. His will, dated March 8, 1802, was proved Nov. 10, 1814. Abigail married Tyler Porter of Boxford Dec. 23, 1779, and was living in 1815.—Ed.

330. The will of widow Grace Davis proves that she died in August or September, 1741. Her son James^t Davis was probably the one who married March 29, 1716, Sarah³ Bailey (Joseph², Richard¹). The Haverhill records give the births and deaths of their sons Elisha⁵ and Richard⁵, 1718-1721, and the births of their daughters Ruth⁵ and Sarah⁵, 1720-1722; but there are manifest errors in the dates. Our notes give no mention of James^t in his mother's will, but he is mentioned in his father's will, 1739.—David W. Hoyt, Providence, R. I.

PART OF SALEM IN 1700. NO. 7.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

THE frontispiece is a map of that section of Salem which is bounded by Essex, Boston and Proctor streets and Norman's Rocks. It is based on actual surveys and title deeds, and is drawn on a scale of two hundred feet to an inch. It shows the location of all the houses that were standing in 1700. The braces marked "a" show where May street now runs.

Essex street was originally the lane to the brick kiln of Thomas Trusler, and was laid out in the earliest settlement of the town. This was also the way to the common pasture. It was first called a highway in 1730; highway to the great common pasture in 1736; way leading from Buffum's corner to the northerly great pasture gate, 1794; turnpike, 1824; and Essex street soon afterward.

Boston street was probably laid out at the time Town bridge was built in 1640. This was known as the west end of the town. The bridge was built by John Pickering in 1640, and five years later it had to be reconstructed. It was then raised, and a causeway, extending nearly two hundred feet, built. This street was called a street or lane, 1676; ye bridge street so called towards Trask's mills, 1680; the street going towards the mill bridge, 1681; highway, 1692; ye country road, 1737; way leading to the town bridge, 1765; the main street, 1773; Town bridge street, 1789; great road, 1789; street leading from Buffum's corner to Town bridge, 1789; and Boston street, 1799. The bridge or causeway was so long that land adjoining was described as bounded by the Town bridge in 1698, 1789, and other dates, nearly to Federal street.

May street was laid out by Benjamin Goodhue between 1794 and 1805. It was first called the new road, 1805; new street, 1810; and May street, 1814.

Proctor street is a part of the earliest road in Salem. It was called a way leading to the gallows' hill pasture in 1870; and for the last twenty years has been called Proctor street.

In the sketches that follow, after 1700, titles and deeds referred to pertain to the houses and land under and adjoining, but not always to the whole lot, the design being, after 1700, to give the history of the houses then standing principally.

William Bean House. This was a part of the lot of Robert Buffum, and was probably granted to him by the town. This corner piece was separated from the rest of the lot by the laying out of Boston street in 1640, or soon afterward. The land descended to his daughter Sarah, wife of William Bean, upon the death of Mr. Buffum in 1669. On this lot was a house, perhaps built by Mr. Bean, or removed thither before 1661. He died in 1715 possessed of the house, but of no land. The house is described in the inventory of Mr. Bean's estate as a small old house out of repair, and was valued at ten pounds. In 1730, it was still standing and possessed by the children, and a deed of adjoining land reserved a right of way from the street to the old house so long as it remained habitable and was inhabited. It was gone soon afterward. This was known as Bean's corner.

Edward Flint and Thomas Flint Lots ("Brickkiln Field"). These two lots constituted the brickkiln field, which was probably granted to Thomas Trusler in the first settlement of the town. Here he made bricks; and died possessed of the lot in 1653. His inventory, dated 5: 1 mo: 1653-4, mentions three acres of marsh and upland where the brickkiln is. His heirs and executors, Henry, Nicholas, and Edward Phelps, conveyed it to William Flint of Salem, yeoman, 4: 9 mo: 1656.* Mr. Flint died in 1673, having devised the lot to his two sons Edward and Thomas. They made a division, Dec. 3, 1694,† as shown on the map. Edward Flint died possessed of his part in 1711, and Thomas in 1719.

Joshua Buffum and Caleb Buffum Lots.

These lots were a part of a lot originally belonging, and probably granted, to John Alderman of Salem. Mr. Alderman died in 1657, having devised this land and also the lot of Nicholas Chattwell, to Ezra Clapp and Nathaniel Clapp. They conveyed it to Giles Coree of Salem, husbandman, July 24, 1663.‡ Mr. Coree conveyed it to Edward Flint, who owned adjoining land, before 1676, but the deed was given Feb. 8, 1681-2.§ The exact lines of this lot of "one acre," as it was called, against the land of the Flints cannot be determined, as it became one lot upon the division between the Flints in 1694. Edward Flint conveyed these lots of Joshua and Caleb Buffum to the widow Gertrude Pope of Salem March 24, 1676-7.|| She conveyed them to her sons-in-law Joshua Buffum and Caleb Buffum, both yeomen, and living directly across the street, Joshua to have the north-westerly half and Caleb the southeasterly, June 6, 1684¶. They owned the lots until after 1700.

Nicholas Chattwell House. This was a part of the lot conveyed by Giles Coree to Edward Flint before 1676, as above. That part of this lot lying southeasterly and northeasterly of the dashes was sold by Mr. Flint to John Maccarter of Salem, dyer, before 1677, but the deed was given May 28, 1682.* Mr. Maccarter built the house now standing upon the lot, and numbered 19, before October, 1685. The ancient house is in good condition, and among its evidences of age are the posts that support the summer beam of the fore-room. From floor to beam the distance was six feet and one inch. About three inches, one-half its thickness, has been hewn from the beam in later times.

This post, with its ornamented shoulder, is shown herewith. Within sight of his windows and only two hundred yards away successively occurred the hanging of the alleged witches in June, July, August and September, 1692; and a large number were in the jails awaiting execution. What, if any, was the effect of these executions upon the minds of Mr. Maccarter and his family is not known; but Nov. 12, of the same year, he conveyed the house and lot, apparently for a price far below their worth, to Nicholas Chattwell of Salem, mariner.† Mr. Flint conveyed to Mr. Chattwell the remainder of the lot April 26, 1695.‡ Mr. Chattwell died Oct. 30, 1700, and, after the death of his wife in 1718, the estate descended to his only surviving child, Priscilla, wife of John Meacham of Enfield, yeoman, who conveyed the house and lot to Thorndike Proctor of Salem, husbandman, June 11, 1724.§ On the death of Mr. Proctor, the estate descended to his son Ebenezer, and upon the latter's decease, to his only child, Sarah, wife of Samuel Merritt. Upon Mrs. Merritt's death, her heirs released the house and lot to her son-in-law, Nathaniel Woodbury, March 4, 1799.* Upon his decease, the estate descended to his children, who conveyed it to Nathaniel and Ebenezer Tuttle April 19, 1836.† It has been in the possession of Nathaniel Tuttle and his family ever since. The old road, as shown on the map, and the town subsequently sold it to him, by vote of the selectmen, March 6, 1693-4.

Mr. Pinson died in July, 1695, possessed of the entire lot "at the bridge pond with the frame of a house standing on it." He devised one-third of the estate to his wife Rebecca, and two-thirds to his only heir, his young daughter Rebecca. The widow married, secondly, Joseph Boobier of Marblehead, and she

John and Rebecca Bickford Lot. This was the lot of Lawrence Southwick in 1656; and he sold it to Thomas Robbins before 1681. Both parties died; and, no deed "appearing of record," Mr. Southwick's executors gave a deed of it, including the "pond or salt marsh," to William Pinson, whose wife Rebecca was Mr. Robbins' niece and heir, in 1694.

Mr. Pinson took possession of a strip of the common land between the pond and land, through which the highway had run from the first settlement of the town. The plan shows the places where the evidence indicates that the alleged witches were executed and buried.

John Adams, who often visited Salem, stopping with his "brother Cranch," who lived on what is now Mill street, wrote in his diary under date of Thursday, Aug. 14, 1766: "Dined at Cranch's; after dinner walked to Witchcraft hill, a hill about half a mile from Cranch's, where the famous persons formerly executed for witches were buried. Somebody within a few years has planted a number of

The drawing of the hill presented herewith, is as it now appears, without the buildings, as none were there in 1692, and with the pond and ancient road as at that time. The point of view is from the northeast, at No. 51 Boston street. The fence at the road may have been there in 1692. The fences running over the hill were not there at that time, but are now. The lot between the road and the fence running parallel to it belonged to Moses Stewart, and was sold to Thorndike Proctor. Mr. Proctor died in 1773, and, in 1775, this lot was assigned to his widow as a part of her dower. It is de-locust trees over the graves, as a memorial of that memorable victory over the 'prince of the power of the air.' This hill is in a large common belonging to the proprietors of Salem, etc. From it you have a fair view of the town, of the river, the north and south fields, of Marblehead, of Judge Lynde's pleasure-house, etc., of Salem village, etc." He may have walked to the highest part of the hill, though his description would probably have been as applicable to the lower hill marked on the map. Some things that he omits to mention, as the harbor, indicate that he ascended the lower hill only.

scribed as the lot "on which the locust trees now stand." In the deed to Stewart, in 1737, no trees are mentioned, and without question these are the ones of which Mr. Adams wrote. The fact that the lot is thus described shows that the locust trees were a distinguishing mark. Elderly men now living remember the great locust trees on this lot in their early boyhood. The trees stood near the fence on the southeasterly end of the lot near the shrubbery shown at the left in the drawing.

A man who now lives on the lot states that he dug up two great stumps there some forty years ago. He pointed out their exact location, and the spots are indicated on the map by x's. One of them was in a crevice in the ledge, now somewhat hidden by the shrubbery. Calef wrote that Mr. Burroughs' remains were dragged by a halter to a hole, or grave, between the rocks, about two feet deep, and buried there with Willard and Carrier; that one of his hands, and his chin, and a foot of one of them, were left uncovered. There is a tradition that Caleb Buffum saw the projecting remains, and after dark went to the spot and covered them, subsequently assisting in taking some of the bodies down the hill to the water, from whence they were transported in boats to their various homesteads. Probably the bodies of George Jacobs, Rebecca Nurse and others were taken away in this manner. Caleb Buffum lived on what is now Boston street opposite his lot shown on the map, within view of the burial places, and only two hundred and fifty yards away. John Maccarter's house was fifty yards nearer, and, knowing the circumstances, the immediate disposal of his homestead is readily explained.

Upham cites, as evidence that Gallows' hill is the place where the executions took place, the statement of John Symonds, who was born in the summer of 1692, that the nurse at his birth saw from the windows of his birth-house the victims as they hung. But whether or not the designated house is the old Symonds' house on North street or one near Beverly bridge is not stated. It is not important, however, as at that date from either place the smaller and nearer hill was visible, and the range is such that, as shown in the picture the top of this hill is outlined against the sky as well as that of the greater hill.

No way was ever known until recently by which a cart could ascend the greater hill, whereas the lower hill was by the side of the first highway in the town.

If the locust trees mark the site of the graves, the place of the executions was near as Calef states that the body of Mr. Burroughs was dragged by a halter to his grave. This little eminence is about sixty feet high, and must have had a broad and beautiful prospect spread out before it when the river was a thousand feet wide, and the great factories and other constructions did not exist.

WILL OF RICHARD KENT.

The will of Richard Kent, sr., of Newbury was proved in the Ipswich court 26: 7: 1654. The following copy is made from the original on file in the probate office at Salem.

LOST AT SEA.

BY JAMES J. H. GREGORY.

When mid our graveyard mounds I tread,
Reading what loving hearts have said,
In words that breathe above the dead,
It thrills and chills me like a moan
Heard from the old sepulchral stone,—
That one short sentence, told to me
By mourning marble, "Lost at Sea."

Surely never from lips of men,
Nor when the truth-recording pen
Proclaimed the worst that men condemn,
Fell sadder words than these to me,—
That wail of sorrow—"Lost at Sea!"
An echo from an unknown shore,
From whence our loved return no more.

In the lone vastness of the deep,
Far down beneath the waves, they sleep,—
The loved ones we so mourn and weep.
They bravely fought the cruel gale,
Till strength and skill could not avail,
And pitying ocean took them home
To depths of calm, where no storms come.

There's scarce a Bible in our town,
But scan its generations down,
And on its pages, old and brown,
At least one record you shall see
Of some much-mourned one lost at sea;
It tells the day he sailed away,—
And that was all there was to say.

Let him who walks our narrow streets,
Whose little homes the stranger greets,
As at each turn he often meets
Their queer array; think of mothers,
Sweethearts, fathers, sisters, brothers,
Who months and years did watch in vain
To greet the loved that never came.

Pale-faced they scanned the mighty deep,
Their weeping eyes refused to sleep;
'Twixt hope and fear their pulses beat,
And kindly neighbors climbed the stair,
Praying the long-lost one was there;
Till hope wrote, with despairing moan,
That death line on the cold gravestone,—
"Lost at Sea."

BAKER GENEALOGY.

The principal family of Bakers in Essex county is that which originated in this county with JOHN BAKER¹ of Ipswich. He was born in 1598, and April 9, 1616, was apprenticed to a grocer in Norwich, England, for twelve years, to learn that business. In 1628 he was a citizen of Norwich, and engaged as a grocer. He married Elizabeth ———, who was born about 1606, and in 1637 came to New England, intending to settle in Charlestown, but came to Ipswich instead. In 1638 he possessed a house lot on High street, in Ipswich, and was made a freeman June 2, 1641. He was a man of prominence and property, and was licensed to sell wine in 1644 and 1647, and beer in 1652, being an innholder in 1664, 1665 and 1666. He bought an extensive tract of land in Topsfield, and removed thither between 1670 and 1678, being of Topsfield in 1680. He died in 168—. His wife Elizabeth was living in 1666. Mr. Baker conveyed his hundred-and-fifty acre farm and buildings in Topsfield, bounded on Baker's (now called Hood's) pond, to his son Thomas in 1661.

Richard Baker wrote from Norwich, England, March 2, 1676, ordering his cousin Mr. John Baker to pay some money to John's brother, Benjamin Baker. No Benjamin Baker appears here in those early days, and this Benjamin was probably a brother who was here on a visit.

SALEM, February 14.

Mr. BENJAMIN FRYE, an aged Gentleman of this Town, died suddenly on Sunday last: He was at Meeting in the Forenoon, went Home well, eat his Dinner, and soon after fell down in his House, and expired in a few Minutes.

Jonathan Andrew advertised for sale a large commodious dwelling-house, four rooms upon a floor, a good barn, and half an acre of land; also, another dwelling-house, two stories high, and two rooms on a floor, standing on the same lot.

Advertisement: As Mr. Arthur Hamilton, late of Salem, merchant, is now gone out of the country, Archibald Wilson is empowered to settle his affairs, and he may be found at Mr. Hamilton's shop in Salem.

Benjamin Punchard, executor of the will of John Punchard, deceased, advertised for sale a very likely healthy negro boy, about seven years of age, a handsome chaise, and a building behind the dwelling-house of the deceased, originally designed for a dwelling-house.

BALCH GENEALOGY.

WITH rare exceptions the name of Balch has been so spelled since the emigrant ancestor came to America. The exceptions, Baltch and Baulch, are so rare that they are hardly worthy of notice.

JOHN BALCH¹, the ancestor of the family in New England, was born in 1579, and lived in Bridgewater, Somersetshire, England. He was one of the company that came to America, with Capt. Robert Gorges, in September, 1623, and established the fishing station at Cape Ann. In 1626, with the company, he removed to Naumkeag, which upon the arrival of Endecott was named Salem. In 1639 he built a house and made his permanent home on Bass River Side, in what is now Beverly, where he had been granted two hundred acres of land two years previously. His house, as it was originally, is shown in the frontispiece.* He was made a freeman in 1630; and held many offices in the town government. He married, first, Margaret —, who died in 163—. He married, second, Agnes (or, Annis) —; and died June —, 1648. His wife Annis survived him, and died in 1657, after a long illness.

Children:—

- 2—I. BENJAMIN², b. in 1629. See below (2).
- 3—II. JOHN². See below (3).
- 4—III. FREEBORN², b. about 1633; and d. about 1658, probably unmarried.

homestead in Beverly, where he held various town offices. He married, first, Sarah Gardner, about 1650, and she died April 5, 1686. He married, second, Abigail, widow of Matthew Clarke, of Marblehead Feb. 5, 1689; and she died Jan. 1, 1690, aged fifty-five. He married, third, Grace Mallet March 15, 1691-2. His wife Grace perhaps died before 1703-4, when he conveyed his homestead to his grandson, Benjamin Balch. He was living in 1706.

Children, born in Beverly:—

- 5—I. SAMUEL³, b. May —, 1651. See below (5).
- 6—II. BENJAMIN³. See below (6).
- 7—III. JOHN³, b. about 1654. See below (7).
- 8—IV. JOSEPH³, was a member of the company of Capt. Thomas Lathrop, known as "The Flower of Essex," and was killed by the Indians at Bloody brook Sept. 18, 1675.
- 9—V. FREEBORN³, b. Aug. 9, 1660. See below (9).
- 10—VI. SARAH⁴, m. James Patch Dec. 29, 1680.
- 11—VII. ABIGAIL³, m. Cornelius Larcom Feb. 8, 1681-2.
- 12—VIII. RUTH³, was unmarried in 1687.
- 13—IX. MARY³, m. Nathaniel Stone March 26, 1689.
- 14—X. JONATHAN³, bapt. April 10, 1670.*
- 15—XI. DAVID³, b. July 9, 1671; d. April 7, 1691.
- 16—XII. DEBORAH³, b. June 6, 1693; m. William Raymond Feb. 8, 1710-1.
- 17—XIII. LYDIA³, b. Aug. 28, 1695; m. Samuel Bowles.

JOHN BALCH², lived in Salem, and was a mariner. He married Mary Conant; and was drowned June 16, 1662. The jury of inquest decided that the deceased, "being constrained to leaue the canowe in which he was bounde over the riuier at Salem ferrie, by reason of the violence of the winde and waues & indeauringe to return againe to the shore, died by the extremitie of the cold with the violence of the winde and rage of the seas and soe perished in the water." His wife Mary survived him, and married, secondly, William Dodge, jr., maltster, in or before 1663. She was the wife of the latter in 1679. John Balch's estate was appraised at £189, 17s.

Child:—

PART OF IPSWICH IN 1700.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The section of Ipswich included in the map presented on page 17, is bounded by South Main and Market streets, Topsfield road, and Ipswich river. The map is based on actual surveys and title deeds, and is drawn on a scale of two hundred feet to an inch. It shows the location of all the houses and the mill that were standing in 1700.

The river was called Mill river in 1674, Ipswich river as early as 1725, Town river, 1729, and Ipswich mill river, 1764.

Market street was probably a path before Jan. 13, 1639, when the town agreed "that Mr Apleton shall make a sufficient cart bridge over the swamp towards the Mill to maintayne and repair the same, at his own charge for the space of seven years next following, in consideration whereof the town hath granted him about one acre and a half of ground, more or less, adjoyneing to his six acre lott to begin where his six acres begins and to run to the brook where that ends."* This was called the country road in 1729; and Market street as early as 1833.

Topsfield road came into existence in consequence of the vote of the town, March 2, 1637, that "All those that have planting ground by the River side beyond Mr. Appleton's are to take the lott layers and lay out a highway as may be most convenient as themselves can best agree and return it to the eleven men."* This was called the Country road in 1737; Road to Topsfield, 1753; and Topsfield road, 1836.

Union street was probably in existence very early, being laid out as a way to the mill, and called the Road to mill in 1759; road leading to the town mills, 1760; road to the cotton factory, 1833; and Union street as early as 1846.

Saltonstall street was also in existence very early, and was probably the original way to the mill. It was called a highway in 1672; highway leading to ye mill, 1713; highway leading to the grist-mills, 1729; lane to Farley's mill, 1779; road to the cotton factory before 1833, when it was first called Winter street, the name being recently changed to Saltonstall street.

In the sketches that follow, after 1700, titles and deeds referred to pertain to the houses and land under and adjoining but not always to the whole lot, the design being after that date to give the history of the houses then standing.

The Mill. The lot on which the mill was situated, the eastern portion, including the swampy section, being called "The mill garden," was granted to Richard Saltonstall, in 1635 for the site of a grist mill.* A dam was constructed and the mill established. After the death of Richard Saltonstall the mill came into the hands of his son Col. Nathaniel Saltonstall of Haverhill, and the millers were for many years Michael and Mesheck Farley. Colonel Saltonstall died in 1707, and in his will he devised the estate to his children, Elizabeth, Richard and Nathaniel. Other mills, as a grist mill, saw mill and fulling mill, were built before 1729, when the property came into the possession of John Waite, jr. The next owners were Michael Farley and Nathaniel Brown. The Farleys subsequently owned and operated the mills for a century. Then followed the Ipswich Manufacturing company, Dane Manufacturing company, Ipswich Hosiery company, etc., successively. The original mill was probably gone in the days of the Saltonstalls.

Thomas Safford House. This lot was originally the property of Gen. Daniel Dennison, having been granted to him by the town April 20, 1635, it being described as "a house lott neere the Mill, containing about two acres, which he hath paled in and built an house upon it, havinge Mr. Fawn's house lott on the southwest.*" Mr. Dennison conveyed to Humphrey Griffin of Ipswich "my Dwelling house situate and being near the Mill in Ipswich aforesaid together with the yard and close adjoining to it," Jan. 19, 1641.† The estate was next owned by John Burnam of Ipswich, who conveyed the "dwelling house & house lot late of Humphrey Griffin situate near the water mill" to Anthony Potter of Ipswich 1:4 mo.: 1648.§ Anthony Potter and his wife Elizabeth, for eighty pounds, conveyed to John Safford of Ipswich, blacksmith, "the house and three-acre house lot on north side of the river, near the mill, bounded with highways round," Jan. 19, 1661.‡ John Safford, for his support, conveyed to his son Thomas Safford his now dwelling house, barn, shop and land, as bounded by the town streets and the Farleys, Sept. 5, 1698.¶ The house is said to have stood where the house is drawn on the map. It was gone before 1739, probably, and Mr. Safford died in 1754, having devised the homestead to his son Stephen.

Estate of Mesheck Farley House. This lot was granted to Michael Farley, upon the request of himself and his son Mesheck, "to build a small dwelling upon where we may be near to attend ye towne service" (that is, probably, as millers, attending the Saltonstall grist mill), Feb. 11, 1683. The house was built in 1686, and he conveyed the estate to the son Me-sheck, upon his marriage, Oct. 1, 1686.* Mesheck Farley died in 1696, and this place descended to his son Michael. Michael Farley was a cordwainer, and died in May, 1757, having conveyed, by deed, the old house to his son Michael. At the time his will was made, in 1751, he was living in a house he had built on the Market street side of the lot. How much later the old house stood, the writer has not learned, but the estate descended to General Farley's son Robert, who died possessed of it about 1830. It then came into the possession of Jacob Brown.

Maj. John Whipple House. This lot was granted by the town to Mr. Fawne Jan. 13, 1637, being described as "a house lott, adjoining to Mr. Appleton's six acres near the Mill."† John Fawne, gentleman, conveyed to John Whipple a house and house lot in Ipswich, containing two and a half acres, formerly sold to grantee by John Jolly, Samuel Appleton, John Cogswell, Robert Muzzey and Humphrey Broadstreet, Oct. 10, 1650.§ It appears that Mr. Whipple bought the estate before 31:8:1642, when it was ordered by the town "that John Whipple should cause the fence to be made betweene the house late Captaine Denisons, and the sayd Jo: Whipple, namely, on the side next Captaine Denyson's and to be paid by the town for the one halfe; and the other half by the Captain."† Mr. Whipple died June 30, 1669, having devised his houses and land here to his son John Whipple, who was known as captain.

Capt. John Whipple resided here, and died in 1683. His real estate was divided among his sons in 1684, and the mansion house his father deceased in, with barn, homestead, etc., called "ye homestead" in Ipswich, of two and a half acres, was assigned to his eldest son, John Whipple. In the inventory, the homestead at town, dwelling house, kiln and other houses were appraised at three hundred and thirty pounds. This son, John, last mentioned, was Maj. John Whipple, esquire, who lived in this ancient house. In his will, dated Aug. 30, 1721, and proved June 15, 1722, he devised his "now dwelling house and homestead with all the buildings upon the same" to his daughter Mary, wife of Benjamin Crocker, and her children. Major Whipple mentioned in his will certain rooms in the house, as parlor, parlor chamber, kitchen, leanto, etc.

Mrs. Crocker died before 1766; and, after the decease of Mr. Crocker, their daughter Mary Gunnison released her interest in the estate to her brother John Crocker, they having succeeded their mother as owners of the estate under the will of their grandfather, Maj. John Whipple, being her only children, April 15, 1767.* Dea. John Crocker, as he was called, died in April, 1806, and by his will, dated May 4, 1804, the estate descended to his son John, except the great chamber in the west end of the house, the use of which he gave to his daughter Elizabeth so long as she remained unmarried. The son John, having removed to Londonderry, N. H., conveyed the homestead to his brother Joseph Crocker, subject to the rights of their sister Elizabeth in the great chamber, April 16, 1807.† Joseph Crocker died in 1812 or 1813, and his heirs, except his sister Lydia, wife of Col. Joseph Hodgkins, released their interest in the estate to her and her husband May 16, 1813.‡ Colonel Hodgkins died Sept. 25, 1829, and his heirs conveyed the house, barn and present lot to Caleb K. Moore of Canterbury, N. H., Oct. 1, 1833.† Mr. Moore conveyed the property to Abraham Bond of Ipswich, manufacturer, Oct. 7, 1841.‖ Mr. Bond died June 24, 1868, and the estate descended to his son Scale: 1 inch = 200 ft.

James W. Bond, who conveyed it to the trustees of the Ipswich Historical Society May 12, 1898.* The ancient edifice was subsequently renovated, the great fireplaces opened, the rooms restored to their original appearance, and furnished in accordance with colonial customs. This is "the home" of the society. The view of the house given herewith shows its rear and one end as they now appear.

Rev. Samuel Belcher House. A part of this lot was granted to Major Denison, the grant made by Ipswich, Jan. 13, 1637, probably being this. The land is described therein as follows: "a house lott next to Mr. Fawnes, to come to the scirt of the hill next the swamp."† John Burnham conveyed it to Anthony Potter of Ipswich, and Mr. Potter conveyed it to Samuel Belcher April 8, 1672.§

The rest of the lot was owned by Jeremiah Belcher of Ipswich prior to 30: 7: 1652, when he entered into a marriage contract with Mary Lockwood of Ipswich, and conveyed to Mr. Robert Paine and Robert Lord, both of Ipswich, and Richard Browne of Newbury, on her behalf, his dwelling house, etc., and land in Ipswich near the mill,‡ etc. Mr. Belcher died in 1692; and his widow, Mary Belcher, conveyed the lot that Mr. Belcher had conveyed to her to her son Samuel Belcher Nov. 11, 1692.¶ The house was apparently gone from this part of the lot. Samuel Belcher thus became possessed of the entire lot. He had built a house on the other part of the lot before this date.

Mr. Samuel Belcher was pastor of the church at the Isles of Shoals several years, but returned to Ipswich, where he spent the remainder of his life. Sept. 15, 1713, when he was living in Newbury, he conveyed to Capt John Whipple of Ipswich, the house, barn and lot;¶ and the next day Mr. Whipple conveyed the estate to Mr. Belcher's wife Mary.* In 1720 and 1753, the estate was owned by William Brackenbury of Ipswich, who died before 1764. William Brackenbury "of Halifax county, Province of North Carolina, now of Ipswich," planter, conveyed the lot of land to Nathaniel Farley of Ipswich, miller, April 30, 1771.† This grantor was probably son of the earlier owner; and the house had probably been removed.

The Miller's House. This lot was a corner of the Samuel Belcher lot purchased of Anthony Potter, as above stated. Mr. Belcher, being at that time at the Isles of Shoals, conveyed to Richard Saltonstall, esq., this lot of about six rods near the mill "to set a house upon for the miller," bounded north by common land or highway where gravel hath been digged, west by a fence of pales," etc., April 20, 1672.§ Upon the decease of Mr. Saltonstall the lot and the house that had been built thereon, by Mr. Saltonstall descended to his son Col. Nathaniel Saltonstall of Haverhill, in connection with the mill. Upon the death of Colonel Saltonstall, in 1707, by his will the property became his children's, Elizabeth, Richard and Nathaniel. Richard died in or about 1714, and Richard Saltonstall of Haverhill, esquire, and Nathaniel Saltonstall, jr., of Boston, gentleman, conveyed to John Waite, jr., clothier, and Samuel Dutch, bricklayer, both of Ipswich, one-third of the property April 2, 1729.‡ Mr. Dutch conveyed his interest therein to Mr. Waite Dec. 1, 1729.¶ Nathaniel Saltonstall and others conveyed their interest in the property to Mr. Waite Sept. 10, 1729.¶ Mr. Waite conveyed to Nathaniel Brown of Ipswich, clothier, the house and lot Nov. 19, 1741.¶ Mr. Brown died, and the guardian of his minor son, Nathaniel Brown, conveyed the same estate to Nathaniel Farley of Ipswich, miller, Jan. 4, 1753.* Jonathan Cogswell, esq., was owning the property, May 9, 1797, when he conveyed the house and lot to Daniel Farley.† Mr. Farley lived in Newburyport, and was a mariner. He conveyed the house and lot to Joseph Farley of Ipswich, mariner, Sept. 28, 1801.§ The same house was perhaps standing in 1836, but it is doubtful.

John Appleton Lot. This lot was granted to Mr. Samuel Appleton by the company of freemen Sept. 26, 1638,‡ being described as follows: "Eight acres of Land, more or less, as it lyeth above the Mill, bounded on the Southeast by the Town River, also having a house lott, formerly granted to John Fawn on the Northeast, also on the Northwest the highway leading into the common." Upon the decease of Mr. Appleton in 1670, the title passed to his grandson Capt. Samuel Appleton. Captain Appleton died in 1693, and the lot descended to his son John Appleton of Ipswich, clothier. The latter conveyed it, with other land on the south, lying between the highway and the river, twenty-five acres in all, to Daniel Appleton of Ipswich, merchant, May 5, 1725.¶

WILL OF JOHN BRADLEY.

The nuncupative will of John Bradley of Salem was proven by Ursly Greenoway before the governor and court, probably in Boston, 28: 5: 1642. The following is a copy of the testimony as it is recorded in Suffolk Probate records, Boston, volume I, page 21(16).

The last [will] & Testament of John Bradley of Salem deceased the fourth month 1642 as he related to us while he was of pfect memory. Ursly Greenoway

BANCROFT GENEALOGY.

The name of Bancroft has sometimes been spelled in the Essex county records Bancraft.

The first person of the name in Essex county, who is known to be the ancestor of nearly all of the family that have lived here, was

LT. THOMAS BANCROFT,¹ who lived in Lynn, in that portion now Lynnfild, and was a husbandman.* His parentage is discussed in an article published in The Antiquarian, volume II, page 94. He lived in Lynn before 1661; and died Aug. 19, 1691. His wife Elizabeth† survived him, and died, his widow, in Lynn, May 1, 1711.

Children:—

- 2—I. THOMAS², b. about 1649; eldest son; lived in Reading; deacon; officer in King Philip's war; m. Sarah Poole in 1673; and was the ancestor of George Bancroft, the historian.
- 3—II. ELIZABETH², m. John Brown before 1691.
- 4—III. JOHN², b. about 1656. See below (4).
- 5—IV. SARAH², m. John (Joseph?) Woodward before 1691.
- 6—V. EBENEZER², b. April 26, 1667, in Lynn. See below (6).
- 7—VI. Mary², b. May 16, 1670; youngest daughter, unmarried in 1691.

4

ENS. JOHN BANCROFT,² born about 1656. He was a husbandman, and lived in that part of Lynn which is now Lynnfild. He married first, Elizabeth Eaton,

*Some think he was baptized in Cheadle, England, Feb. 10, 1622.

†He is said to have had two wives: the first, Alice, daughter of Michael Bacon of Dedham; and the second, whom he married in 1648, Elizabeth, daughter of Michael and Sarah Metcalf.

Sept. 24, 1678; and she died March 12, 1704-5. He married, second, Hannah —before 1711, and she died June 7, 1732, aged seventy-five. He died Jan. 25, 1739-40 aged eighty-three.

Children, born in Lynn:—

- 8—I. JOHN³, b. Jan. 25, 1682. See below (8).
- 9—II. RAHAM³, b. Feb. 9, 1685. See below (9).
- 10—III. ELIZABETH³, b. Sept. 25, 1688; m. Thomas Newhall of Lynn Dec. 12, 1717; and they were living in Lynn in 1734.
- 11—IV. MARTHA³, b. April 26, 1695; m. Samuel Aborne of Salem Oct. 29, 1720.
- 12—V. TABITHA³, b. Aug. 1, 1697.
- 13—VI. HEPZIBAH³, b. Oct. 29, 1699; m. Samuel Rawdin of Lynn before 1733.
- 14—VII. HANNAH³, b. March 5, 1701-2; probably m. Joseph Gowing April 10, 1722.
- 15—VIII. TIMOTHY³, b. Jan. 20, 1704-5.

6

CAPT. EBENEZER BANCROFT,³ born in Lynn April 26, 1667. He was a weaver and husbandman, and lived in Lynn. He owned a grist-mill on Bates brook, having bought it in 1713. He married Abigail Eaton May 19, 1692; and she was his wife in 1715. He died in June, 1717, between the fourth and tenth of the month.

Children, born in Lynn:—

- 16—I. ABIGAIL⁴, b. Nov. 9, 1696; m., first, John Hartshorn of Reading, housewright, before 1723, and they were living in 1725; and, second, Edward Pratt of Reading before 1741.
- 17—II. SARAH⁴, b. July 5, 1698; m. Joseph Trow of Marblehead, mariner, before 1725; and they were both of Marblehead in 1741.
- 18—III. EBENEZER⁴, b. Aug. 5, 1700. See below (18).

JOHN WINTHROP THE YOUNGER.

BY GEORGE FRANCIS DOW.

John Winthrop the younger, founder of Ipswich and the sixth governor of Connecticut, was born at Groton, county of Suffolk, England, on Feb. 12, 1605-6. He was the son of John Winthrop, afterwards governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, and was educated at Trinity college, Dublin, and at the Inner Temple, London, where he studied law. He soon abandoned the law and entered the naval service where he served under the Duke of Buckingham in his unsuccessful expedition for the relief of the French Protestants at Rochelle. After a tour of the continent he returned to London in August, 1639, and found his father actively engaged in organizing the first great emigration to the shores of New England, which sailed in the following March. He married his cousin, Martha Fones, Feb. 8, 1631, and six months later they embarked for New England.

Not long after his arrival at Boston, he was elected an assistant, or member of the council, and a year later, in March, 1632-3, he took with him twelve men and began a plantation at Agawam, afterwards called Ipswich. Early in the fall of 1634 his wife and little daughter died, causing an entire change of plans for the future, and soon after he returned to England. Here he was commissioned governor and placed in charge of a company to be planted in Connecticut, Lords Say and Brook being among the projectors of the scheme. Before sailing, Winthrop married Elizabeth Reade, a step-daughter of Rev. Hugh Peter. A fort was built at Saybrook and a settlement made, but Winthrop seems to have spent much of his time at Boston, where his young wife was living, and before long was at Ipswich, where, Feb. —, 1637, he was chosen one of the prudential men. In June, 1638, he received authority to set up salt-works at Ryall Side (Beverly), which was done; and there he spent much of his time during the next two years. In the autumn of 1640, he obtained a grant of Fisher's island, on the Connecticut shore, and, Aug. 3, 1641, sailed for England to organize a company. This was finally accomplished and he returned to New England in 1643.

From various causes the Fisher's island project was temporarily abandoned, and Winthrop became active in establishing iron works at Braintree. In Jan., 1645, he sold his farm at Ipswich and not long after removed to what is now New London, Conn. He is said to have built the first house in that part of Connecticut. May, 1650, he declined re-election as assistant, an office which he had held for eighteen years, and thereafter cast his lot entirely with the colony at Connecticut, soon taking a leading part in its government, being elected an assistant in due time, and governor on May 21, 1651, which office he held for nearly eighteen years, a longer period than was ever reached by any other chief executive in Connecticut. Governor Winthrop was in England in 1661 to 1663, and was elected a member of the Royal Society, a tribute to his scientific accomplishments.

He succeeded in his mission to England, obtaining from Charles II. a charter uniting the colonies of New Haven and Connecticut, being himself named in the charter as the first governor. In August, 1664, he was present at the surrender of New Amsterdam (New York).

During the last years of his life, his leisure hours were devoted to astronomical and chemical research. He possessed a telescope, which he afterwards gave to Harvard college. In 1672, his wife died, and April 5, 1676, while at Boston attending a meeting of the Commissioners of the United Colonies, he, too, died, and was buried beside his father, in what is now King's Chapel burying-ground.

[Deposition of Robert Gutch: That goodwife Oliver in gladness of spirit came into my house and said to some there (not members), "Lift up your heads, your redemption draweth nigh;" afterwards, being advised to remember what she was punished for, she said she came out from that with a scarfe and ring; upon which I asked her whether she remembered this passage, That there were some whose necks had iron sinews and brows of brass.* She replied, she did hope to live to tear my flesh in pieces, and all such as I were.† Sworn 'in court 2: 1 mo: 1647, Henry Bartholomew, clerk. Henry Cooke deposed the same.

Deposition of Jabish Hackett: That, sojourning at house of Rich Prey, often heard Prey call his wife jade and Round-head, and curse her, wishing a plague and a pox on her, and especially after Richard Prey came home from meeting last Lord's day, having beaten her that day. It was reported at Mr. Leader's that he stayed at home, swearing at her. Mrs. Elenor heard him. Thomas Wiggins told Prey of it, and he denied its truth. Sworn 18: 11: 1647, before Rob. Bridges. Rich. Hood deposed the same.

NOTES.

Joseph Annable, his wife Elizabeth, their daughter Hannah, and grandchild Thomas Wiles were warned out of Wenham March 25, 1729.—Sessions court records, 1726-1744, page 109.

"1789 and 1790," on page 139, Volume V of the Antiquarian, in sixth line from bottom of first column, should read "1689 and 1690."—Ed.

John Atwood (No. 1, Vol. IV., p. 106) was probably born Feb. 16, 1693, and died in Pelham, N. H., July 18, 1783. He may have been a son of Philip² (Philip¹); but I have found no record of the birth of a John, son of Philip². It seems more probable that this John was John³, said to have been of Bradford, son of Deacon John² of Charlestown, and grandson of Herman¹ of Boston.

Philip² was son of Philip (see Vol. V., p. 191) of Malden, Charlestown and Bradford, an emigrant from London. (Hotton's List shows a Philip, aged sixteen, in the "Planter," 1635, and another, aged thirteen, in the "Susan and Ellen," in 1635. It is possible that he entered in one and failed to sail, or was refused passage on the "Susan and Ellen" on account of age. He died in Groveland Feb. 1, 1700, aged eighty-five, having married, first, Rachel Batchelder, who died Feb. 5, 1673-4; second, April 6, 1675, Elizabeth Grover, who died Oct. 7, 1676; and, third, Elizabeth ———, who died April 3, 1688.

Emigrant Philip's other children were Oliver², born in 1671; married, March 30, 1699, Ann Betts of Malden; Rachel², born Aug. —, 1653; Mary², born in 1655. Oliver² and Ann (Betts) had Anna³, born Jan. 9, 1699-1700; Elizabeth³, born Sept. 17, 1702; died in Malden July 31, 1703 (G. S.); John³, born Nov. 8, 1704; Oliver³, born Nov. 3, 1706; Betts³, (son), born April 14, 1709; Joseph³, born in Boston Oct. 12, 1712; Philip³, born in Boston May 14, 1715; married Rebecca —; and had Rebecca⁴, baptized June 10, 1739; died Oct. 18, 1740; and Philip⁴, baptized June 9, 1741. John³, married, in Boston, Dec. 21, 1738, Alice Oliver, who was a widow in 1754; issue: Alicet⁴, born Feb. —, 1740; Anna⁴, born May 16, 1742; Sarah⁴, born Aug. 12, 1744. I believe Rachel (Atwood) Frye married, in Bradford, Jan. 22, 1722, Abraham Hazeltine (Abraham², Robert¹), and subsequently Christopher Bartlett.

Joshua Atwood (No. 6, Vol. IV., p. 107) married Mehitable Seavey; and died July 8, 1809. Children: Hannah (No. 23), died Dec. 27, 1835; Mehitable (No. 25), married, July 11, 1768, James Foster; Rachel (No. 26), married, April 13, 1779, Phineas Hamblett; Daniel (No. 27), married, Nov. 26, 1789, Elizabeth Gage; and died Dec. 28, 1834. Elizabeth (No. 28), married, Aug. 13, 1776, David Gage; and died March 18, 1845. Joshua (No. 29), married, Sept. 19, 1797, Sarah M. Adams; and died May 5, 1813. Ednah (No. 32), died April 20, 1813. Alice (No. 33), married, Dec. 12, 1782, Josiah Hamblett. Susanna (No. 35), married, Feb. 9, 1807, Jeremiah Stickney; and died June 10, 1839. Other children: John, born Feb. 28, 1768; David and Jonathan, twins, born June 12, 1770; latter married, March 11, 1798, Lydia Coburn; and William, born Feb. 17, 1773; married, Dec. 26, 1799, Elizabeth Hall.

362. Is it a fact that the early settlers of Eastern Massachusetts built log houses? Some were framed, but were the others built of logs, rough or hewn, piled horizontally to form a structure similar to those now used in the Maine woods or in the south? The use of the thatched roof had to be abandoned because of its inflammability, but the log house ought to have been retained on account of the ease of construction and abundance of available timber. It seems probable that in some of the seventeenth century dwellings remaining, the original log cabin should still be traced, though surrounded with additions. Is any such known? Because it is known that the pioneers of the south and west built log cabins, is it not therefore assumed that those of Massachusetts Bay did likewise? What direct evidence can now be obtained to determine this question?

FITCH GENEALOGY: DESCENDANTS OF DEA. ZACHARY FITCH OF READING. By Hon. Ezra S. Stearns. Boston, 1902. The name of Mr. Stearns, as compiler, insures this pamphlet of twenty-three octavo pages to be accurate, as well as full.

GEN. ISRAEL PUTNAM AND THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL. By Alfred P. Putnam, D. D. Salem, 1901. This is an interesting pamphlet of sixty-seven pages of fine type: illustrated with portraits of the general, map, etc.

CHARLES ALLEN OF PORTSMOUTH, N. H., 1657, AND SOME OF HIS DESCENDANTS. By Frank W. Atten. Boston, 1902. This is a five page genealogical sketch of a comparatively unknown family, by Mr. F. W. Allen of Skowhegan, Me.

HISTORY OF THE OLD ARGILLA ROAD IN IPSWICH, MASS. By Rev. T. F. Waters. Salem, 1900. Paper 8vo., forty-three pages. This is an account of the land titles and the people who lived on this ancient highway in the early days.

THE MEETING HOUSE GREEN. By Rev. T. Franklin Waters. Salem, 1902. Paper, 8vo., 36 pages. This is a study, from the records, of the Meeting House Green in Ipswich, and the land and houses that stood around it, by the president of the Ipswich Historical society. A fine engraving of the territory forms the frontispiece. Mr. Waters' work is commended as the kind of endeavor that every local society should interest itself in, before evidence vanishes, and uncertain tradition controls.

GENEALOGY OF THE DESCENDANTS OF JOHN WHITE OF WENHAM AND LANCASTER, MASS., 1638-1900. By Almira L. White. Vol. II. Haverhill, 1900. The first volume of this work was published two years ago by Miss White, whose address is Haverhill, Mass. This volume contains 924 pages, octavo, and is bound in cloth in style like the first volume. It is illustrated with forty-eight engravings of homesteads, portraits, family groups, etc., the frontispiece being the Simon Butler homestead at Leominster, Mass. The index comprises 125 pages. The two volumes manifest the great amount of industry as well as the perseverance of the author. She states that she has manuscript sufficient for a third volume, which will be published as soon as subscriptions are obtained to meet the expense. If this is accomplished, few families indeed can boast of so extensive and complete a history and genealogy. The price of each volume is five dollars.

No. 3.

PART OF SALEM IN 1700. NO. 8.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

THE map on page 99 represents that part of Salem located on the Peabody line that is bounded north by Boston street in Salem and Main street in Peabody, and on the east by Bow street. It is drawn on a scale of three hundred feet to an inch.

The street on the north, now known respectively as Boston and Main streets, was called a highway in 1660, probably being laid out in 1647, when the bridge, known as the Stone bridge, was built over Strong Water brook. It was called ye country road or highway in 1717; road leading to Boston, 1749; road to Salem, 1757; great country road leading to Salem in 1793; and the main street in 1818. The Salem portion was called West street in 1822, and Boston street some years later. Aborn street which runs westerly across the map was probably the original road in this section to Boston. Just south of Strong Water brook, without the limits of the map, a branch turned to the north running nearly parallel with the brook and meeting with what is now Main street in Peabody, where it is shown on the map. The latter road ran over common land for more than a score of years after 1700, and continued to be a highway until about 1750 or 1760, being the better road in going to Lynn and Boston. The present Washington street, leading from Main street at the Lexington monument caused the discontinuance of the ancient road. Aborn street was called a highway in 1660; and John Robinson, aged about eighty-eight years, deposed, in 1729, "that he very well remembers that there was a road by the dwelling house of Samuel Aborn and was improved as a road from Case's and Locker's to ye said Samuel Aborn's house and so over the brook for about sixty years and upward." * It was called the highway which leads by the field called glass house field in 1707; country road, 1733; the way to glass house fields, 1735; way to Aborn's, 1735; lane in 1738; Shillaber's lane, 1760; way leading to Locker's run, 1767; way leading to Samuel Aborn's, 1770; a back road, 1774; and Aborn street in 1804. The Aborn house stood in what is now Peabody between the Locker lot and Strong Water brook on Aborn street.

The section on the south side of Aborn street was the historic glass house field. Here glass was made by Lawrence Southwick, Ananias Concline, John Concline, and Obadiah Holmes in or before 1638. After 1645, the works apparently did not thrive, though they may have been continued a number of years. In a petition of the Conclines to the general court in October, 1645, it is stated that the undertakers or company have neglected the works for the past three years. Earthen ware is said to have been made here at the glass house by the glass men. This was the centre of the persecution of the Quakers in the seventeenth century. The first meeting held in Salem by the missionaries, Holder and Copeland, in 1657, was probably held in the Southwick house, and later by the saintly Brend and the martyr Leda. Here lived Provided Southwick, the subject of Whittier's poem, "Cassandra Southwick," Samuel Gaskin (Provided's husband), Josiah Southwick, John Hill and others. Lawrence Southwick and his wife were banished, and they died at Shelter island, in Long Island sound, of privation and exposure the next winter. Here, also, was their first burial ground.

* Essex Registry of Deeds, book 75, leaf 191.

In the sketches that follow, after 1700, titles and deeds referred to pertain to the houses and land under and adjoining, but not always to the whole lot, the design being, after that date to give the history of the houses then standing.

Estate of John Loomis Lot. The western portion of this lot was a part of the lot of one and a half acres conveyed by Ralph Tompkins of Salem, planter, to Edward Gaskill of Salem, ship-carpenter, April 22, 1659.* Mr. Gaskill conveyed it to John Lambert of Salem, seaman, in or before 1660; and Mr. Lambert conveyed ten rods of it to John Loomis before Jan. 28, 1660.† 13 : 6 : 1660, Mr. Loomis petitioned the town for a small enlargement, and he was granted about sixteen rods "between the two ways towards the town of Salem." He had already erected a house upon the original part of the lot. Mr. Loomis died about 1685. The house was gone before 1700, when the widow, Mary Loomis, and her only son, John Loomis, for twelve pounds, conveyed to John Traske of Salem, miller, "all that our land belonging to our homestead about thirty rods in Salem."‡

Samuel Gaskill House. This lot of about an acre and a half and ten rods of the estate of John Loomis lot, and the dwelling house on this lot, were the property of John Hart from about 1650 to his decease in 1656. It then came into the possession of Ralph Tompkins of Salem, planter, who conveyed the house and land, for nine pounds, to Edward Gaskill of Salem, ship-carpenter, April 22, 1659.* Before Jan. 28, 1660, Mr. Gaskill (or, Gascoine, or Gaskin, as the name was afterwards spelt) conveyed the eastern part of the lot and the house to John Lambert of Salem, seaman, and on that day Mr. Lambert re-conveyed it to Mr. Gaskill for twenty-five pounds.* Mr. Gaskill lived in the house, and when very sick, July 29, 1690, he conveyed the house and lot to his son-in-law, John Lambert, sr., of Salem.†

The estate came into the hands of Samuel Gaskill, sr. (son of Edward), of Salem, husbandman; and he conveyed the house, barn, orchard and one-half of the lot to his son Samuel Gaskill, jr., of Salem, husbandman, for the maintenance of himself and wife, April 14, 1713,‡ the other half part of the lot having become the property of the grantee, who then lived thereon. Samuel Gaskill, jr., died between 1720 and 1733, and the estate descended to his sons Jonathan and Samuel Gaskill.

Daniel Southwick, aged eighty-one, and Samuel Ebborn, aged seventy-eight, deposed, in 1717, that this lot was originally in three parts, "on which were erected, built and being three cottages or dwelling places at or before 1661, viz.: One by Edward Gaskill of Salem, husbandman, deceased; one by Thomas Hart§ of Salem, cordwinder, deceased; and one by Peter Joyce of Salem, seaman or mariner.||

Quaker Burial Ground. This was a part of the lot of Joseph Boyce, and for five pounds he conveyed to Thomas Maule, Josiah Southwick, sr., John Small, John Burton, sr., and Daniel Southwick, all of Salem, this lot of sixteen rods, for a burying place, June 10, 1680.¶ This has been a burial ground of the Friends ever since.

Joseph Boyce House. This lot was in the possession of Joseph Boyce in 1659. In his will, dated 4 : 9 mo : 1684, and proved Feb. 18, 1694-5, he devised all his estate to his wife Eleanor for life, and then "my now dwelling house to my son Joseph" for his life, remainder to his son ("my grandson") Joseph Boyce in fee tail male. The house, barn, orchard and lot were valued at forty pounds. The son Joseph Boyce, of Salem, husbandman, released his life interest to his son Joseph Boyce of Salem, tanner, the homestead estate of three and three quarter acres, with the houses, barn, etc., Jan. 9, 1707-8.* The son Joseph Boyce³ died possessed of the estate, and it descended to his son Joseph Boyce⁴ of Salem, sadler, before Feb. 20, 1723-4, when he mortgaged it.† He became a tanner, succeeding his father in the business, and May 8, 1728, conveyed a one-half interest in the lot, house, barn, tanyard, fulling-mill, and stream to his brother John Boyce of Salem, tanner.‡ They conveyed the estate to Joseph Very, jr., of Salem, husbandman, July 3, 1734;§ and Mr. Very sold it to Benjamin Nurse of Salem, husbandman, for three hundred pounds, March 7, 1734-5.|| Mr. Nurse conveyed the same estate, for one hundred and eight pounds, to John Sterns of Salem, tailor, June 28, 1736.¶ Mr. Sterns died in 1738, and his administrator for one hundred and twenty pounds, conveyed it to Samuel Smith of Salem, shopkeeper, Oct. 2, 1741. Mr. Smith conveyed the house and land around it to Benjamin Pickman, esq., of Salem for four hundred and twenty pounds in bills, March 23, 1749.†† For sixty-six pounds, thirteen shillings and fourpence, Mr. Pickman sold the estate to Joseph Flint of Reading, housewright, Jan. 27, 1752.‡‡ The house was probably gone soon after.

Solomon Southwick House. A part of this lot was granted to Lawrence Southwick, the glass maker, and he erected a dwelling upon it before 11:10 mo: 1639, when the town of Salem granted to him two acres adjoining his house and lot. 14:7:1640, the town granted to John Concline of Salem, a glass-man, five and a half acres near the glass house, and he, too, built a house upon the same before 1661. The Concline house and lot came into the possession of Josiah Southwick, and was gone before 1702. One acre at the northern end of this ground was probably a part of the land granted to Obadiah Holmes in 1638 and 1639, on which he erected a dwelling house before 1661. The house was apparently standing in 1702, but gone before 1711. Lawrence Southwick died in 1660, having in his will devised his house and lot to his son Daniel. The homestead came into the possession of the deceased's son Josiah Southwick before 1688; and he died possessed of it in 1693. In the division of the estate of Josiah Southwick, probably the house and lot came to be the estate of his son Solomon Southwick, who had removed to Rhode Island, before Nov. 22, 1711, when he conveyed the house and lot of eight acres to Joseph Boyce, jr.,* an acre at the northern end of the lot having previously become the property of Mr. Boyce. The latter conveyed the entire "nine acres in glass house field, being ye homestead where Josiah Southwick lived and died," Dec. 4, 1711.*

The house is mentioned in the deed from Solomon Southwick to Joseph Boyce, jr., above, Nov. 22, 1711, but the deed from Mr. Boyce to Mr. Trask, twelve days later, does not convey the house and excepts "ye bricks of ye dwelling house." This would indicate that the house had been destroyed by fire or otherwise, between those dates. The difference in the consideration of the two deeds also evidences that the house was gone when the last deed was given.

The frontispiece is a view of this lot from a point on Ord street, just below where it is joined by Bow street, looking westward.

The street is Abbott street, which now runs through the original Southwick lot.

John Pickering Lot. Henry Rennalds and Ananias Concline, both of Salem, were probably grantees of this lot in separate parcels. Mr. Concline built a house before 1661, and it was gone before 1702. Mr. Rennalds owned the lot April 10, 1688, when he conveyed the four acres southwest of the dashes to Lt. John Pickering and Edward Flint.* Mr. Rennalds conveyed the remainder of the lot to John Pickering, jr., of Salem July 6, 1689.† Mr. Flint apparently conveyed his interest in the southern part of the lot to John Pickering, jr., Nov. 14, 1693.‡ John Pickering, sr., died in May, 1694; and in his will he devised this land at the glass house field to his eldest son, John Pickering, who then owned the other part. The son died possessed of the lot in 1722, having devised it to his wife Sarah, for life, and remainder to his eldest son Theophilus Pickering.

George Locker House. This lot was early owned by John Hill, who died in 1680, having devised the residue of his estate, including "three acres of upland lying in glass house field," to his wife Lydia (Buffum). She married, secondly, George Locker before 1688. Mrs. Locker was the executrix of the will of Mr. Hill, and she conveyed to Robert Wilson "the house we now live in," except her brother Buffum's new end and one-third of the orchard on ye south side adjoining to it next John Pickering's, and one-third of ye hill, and one third of the planting land by Samuel Ebourn's in ye middle field in ye place called ye glass house field, April 1, 1696.§ Mr. Wilson conveyed the same to Mr. Locker July 17, 1696,|| and the latter lived here many years after 1700. How long after 1702 the house was standing has not been determined.

BOXFORD PARISHES IN ENGLAND.

BY OSCAR FAY ADAMS.

BOXFORD IN BERKSHIRE.

(Population: 549 (1891). 53 miles from London (Paddington terminus of Great Western), station at Newbury. Parish church, St. Andrew; register from 1558; living, a rectory. Other churches and chapels: Primitive Methodist; Wesleyan.)

The New England town of this name, the Massachusetts Boxford, was thus designated, according to one authority, for Boxford, England, but the precise location of the English original this same authority does not so much as hint at. In Perley's history of the town the name is thought to be derived from the Berkshire Boxford, while a third writer declares that the town probably received its name from Boxford, England, where was born the Reverend Samuel Phillips, pastor of Rowley in 1685. As the aforesaid pastor of Rowley was a native of the English county of Berkshire it would thus appear as if the Berkshire Boxford rather than the Suffolk town were the sponser of the Massachusetts town, and, at second hand, for the only other American Boxford, a locality in Missouri. But because of its somewhat close association with several of the early settlers of New England the Suffolk town, is also described below.

If we take the Lambourn road leading northwest from Newbury we shall arrive, after a walk of four miles, or a little over, at the small village of Boxford, in the midst of a pleasantly rural neighbourhood near the little stream known as the river Lambourn. There is not much to see in Boxford, a purely agricultural parish including within its limits the hamlet of Westbrook as well as the village of Boxford itself. Strangers are usually shown the cottage long inhabited by Oliver Sampson, a Quaker many times imprisoned for refusing to pay tithes, and it is fair to assume that the conscientious Oliver was wholly unacquainted with the interior of the parish church, since he objected so strenuously to parish tithes. The church is an unpretending structure, built in 1670, and distinguished only by its low western tower. The principal monument is one to the memory of James Anderton, rector here in 1672. The village boasts one inn, The Chequers, and the hamlet can show the Bell Inn, and with these the tale of the parish hosteleries is complete. A mile and a half westward is the village of Wickham, of some interest to the archæologist on account of the Saxon tower of its church, but the ordinary traveller will probably trouble himself very little about this and after a brief stay at Boxford will find his way back to pleasant Newbury.

BOXFORD IN SUFFOLK.

(Population: 873 (1891). 58 miles from London (Liverpool St. terminus of Great Eastern), station at Sudbury. Parish church: St. Mary; register from 1587; living, a rectory. Congregational chapel. National School. Industries: milling, malting, brewing, brick and tile works.)

The Suffolk parish of Boxford is situated in the southern part of the shire, six miles from a railway, and in the midst of gently rolling farm lands. The village is to be found at one corner of the parish, very near the boundaries of the neighbor parishes of Edwardstone, Assington, and Groton, and may be reached, as it was by the writer, from Hadleigh, six miles east, at the end of the Hadleigh branch of the Great Eastern railway, or from Sudbury, as far to the west, on the Stour Valley branch of the same system. As the highways between Boxford and Sudbury are better than those to the eastward, it will perhaps be found best to approach the village from Sudbury, but there are pleasing rural landscapes along either route. Boxford village appears to its fullest advantage from its being nearly all concentrated upon two streets; a long one extending east and west, and another crossing the upper, or eastern end of the first one. The noisy little river Box, its waters turned to account by the wheels of several flour mills, flows through the place and, very near the church, is spanned by a bridge over which passes the road to Sudbury. To north and south the land rises gradually, and from these gentle heights a pleasant prospect is afforded of the village with its great flint church, the fertile fields surrounding it, and the tower of Groton church above the treetops near it, a scant half mile away.

The dwellings, in most cases, do not exhibit signs of great age, although not a few must be of seventeenth century date, but they have a comfortable, homelike aspect, lining the street in close, neighborly fashion. On the north side of the way, but in the parish of Edwardstone, is a small graveyard in which the Congregational chapel stands, a plain modern structure, much resembling a Friends meeting house. Opposite The Fleece inn at the upper end of the village, and reached by a footbridge over the narrow river, is a long, gambrel roofed mansion, the residence of Mr. Kingsbury, a builder of Boxford, that looks very much like the New England rural home of some representative of "the Brahmin caste" of the region. Still farther north, beyond the Chequers inn, is a second long, large house, with projecting upper story, in this instance, dazzlingly clean in its coat of whitewash, and bearing the date M. D. C. L. V.

The village shows less than the usual number of public houses, for one of its size, but as there is a police station with court room, a superintendant, and two constables, it is reasonable to infer that the parish affords occasional employment to these officials. But that crime is not rampant in this corner of Suffolk may be also inferred from the circumstance that the police station has but two cells. The national school can accomodate two hundred children on occasion, but the Queen Elizabeth Grammar School that once flourished here, and that John Winthrop may have known, has long been but a memory.

St. Mary's church is the chief object in Boxford, both as regards size and interest, a spacious edifice of the Early Third Pointed period, displaying much variety of tracery in its many windows, with here and there suggestions of flamboyant motifs. It includes a clerestoried nave, choir, aisles prolonged to the east end of the choir, the southern aisle being the broader, north and south porches, the former of oak with groinings of the same material, the other of stone and unrestored and at the west end an embattled tower containing a clock and eight bells, and surmounted by a slender spire, or fleche. Save for the north porch the whole building was restored in 1888.

The nave is five bays in extent, the arches in the pier arcades being of unusual width, yet not so wide, however, as the two arches on each side of the choir looking into the aisles. There is a carved oak door in the tower, and a small door in the south choir aisle in addition to the entrances from the porches. Floods of light stream through the great windows effectually dispelling any religious gloom that might gather otherwise in the corners. St. Mary's has no monuments to show the visitor, and but few mural tablets either. Among these few, however, the writer discovered one in the north choir aisle bearing the following inscription:—

In Memory of Elizabeth Hyam
of this Parish, for the fourth time a Widow:
who by a Fall, that
brought on a Mortification, was at last
hastened to her End
on the 4th May, 1748,
in her 113th Year.

There is a subtle ironical flavour in the expression "hastened to her end," when taken in connection with the tale of the years of the widow Hyam, and but for that untimely Fall, and consequent Mortification, she might, one would think, have survived till it could have been said of her, as of the wife of Bath:

"Husbands at the church door had she five."

THE OLD SCHOOLHOUSE.

BY W. W. CLAFLIN.

Still by the quiet road it stands,
The schoolhouse built by ancient hands,
Beneath whose oaken lintel low
Gathered the youth of long ago.

Where throned upon his chair of state,
Behind his desk the master sate,
And armed with rod and spartan rule,
Reigned awful o'er the village school.

Those rude old benches—built to seat
Each urchin high with dangling feet!
How many a tender limb grew sore,
Longing in vain to touch the floor.

Still stands the house, but altered quite—
The old red clapboards now are white,
And seats within, of modern mould,
Another race of urchins hold.

ANSWERS.

243. There is apparently a mistake in this query. "Peter" should probably read "Perley." See No. 324.—Ed.

316. Margaret Osborne, who married Joseph Buffum in Salem March 29, 1737, was a younger daughter of William and Margaret (Derby) Osborne of Salem. William Osborne was born May 3, 1682, and died Sept. 29, 1771. He was married to Margaret Derby Feb. 8, 1710-1. Mrs. Osborne was born in Salem Aug. 14, 1693; and died July 11, 1765.—Ed.

324. Sarah Mitchell, wife of Perley Ayer, was daughter of John and Abigail Mitchell, and was born in Haverhill April 16, 1738. Her mother was Mrs. Abigail Bacheller at the time of her marriage to Mr. Mitchell in 1737. Sarah married Perley Ayer Nov. 13, 1754. Her father lived in Haverhill, and was called "gentleman" at his death in February, 1774. In his will, dated Feb. 11, 1774, and proved Feb. 22, 1774, he mentions among his other children, his daughter Sarah Ayer. Perley Ayer was a tanner and lived in Methuen until 1765, when he removed to Haverhill, where he subsequently lived. She died in 1776, and after marrying a second wife, Lois Stevens, he died in 1781.—Ed.

THE OLD FAMILIES OF SALISBURY AND AMESBURY, MASSACHUSETTS, with some related families of adjoining towns and of York County, Maine. By David W. Hoyt. Providence, R. I., 1902. This is a continuation of Mr. Hoyt's invaluable work bearing the above title. He has just issued two numbers, VI and VII, which will form the first part of Volume II. Besides genealogies of the Barrett, Cilley, Eldridge, Follansbee, Heard and Keysar families, these two numbers contain records of churches in Amesbury and Salisbury. The parts contain about eighty pages, and are sold for a dollar each. Mr. Hoyt's address is Providence.

It would seem that the earliest survey of the Ohio valley was made by the British. The plan of the mother country dealing with the American Indians was frustrated. COLONIZATION OF THE OLD NORTHWEST TERRITORY.

At about the year 1744, when New York was the most western settled province, some persons in England proposed the settlement of the valley of the Ohio; and in 1753 Washington was engaged in making a survey of the region for a company. Ten years later an association, called the "Indiana company," sought a grant of that section from the crown; but the acts of the mother country in her dealings with the American colonies frustrated a furtherance of the attempt.

As soon as the final act in our separation from Great Britain, at the close of the war of the Revolution, had been concluded, a plan was conceived for the formation of a new state along the Ohio river, to be known by the name of Ohio. In the latter part of March, 1783, Col. Timothy Pickering of Salem, who had served as a military officer under Washington, promulgated the plan, in which some of the principal officers in the army were interested with himself. With this act of Col. Pickering the company which afterward settled the territory originated.

The scheme included the formation of an association that should adopt a state constitution before the settlement was begun, and grants of the land should be principally for the benefit of the soldiers of the Revolution and their families.

Oct. 14, 1784, Elbridge Gerry of Marblehead, famous as one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, a member of the Provincial congress, and friend and ally of Samuel Adams, when a certain committee presented a report upon western lands, moved to amend it consistently with the plan of Colonel Pickering. Congress voted that it would take control in any new state until the settlers assumed a temporary government.

The Ohio river was the great artery of the Northwest territory, which was a fertile country, with diversified and well-watered soil. Before the settlement was begun, in August, 1784, M. St. Jean De Crevecoeur, consul of France for the Middle states, sailed up the Ohio river, and in writing of his trip said: "I consider then, the settling of the lands, which are watered by this river, as one of the finest conquests that could ever be presented to man; it will be so much the more glorious, as it will be legally of the ancient proprietors, and will not exact a single drop of blood. It is destined to become the source of force, riches, and the future glory of the United States."

Rufus King of Newburyport and Elbridge Gerry, both members of the Provincial congress, were appointed, in 1785, agents of Massachusetts for fixing the terms upon which the claim of the state upon the territory would be relinquished. They seem to have made the total and irrevocable exclusion of slavery a condition precedent.

March 1, 1786, delegates from eight counties of the state met at Boston, in the tavern called the "Bunch of Grapes," to form the articles of agreement of the company. It was voted that the association be named "The Ohio Company." Dr. Manasseh Cutler of the Hamlet parish in Ipswich (subsequently incorporated as the town of Hamilton) was one of a committee of five to prepare a plan of association or articles of agreement. The plan adopted provided that the business be conducted by a board of directors consisting of three persons; and, March 8, 1787, he was chosen one of the three.

When the ordinance of 1787 came up in congress, Doctor Cutler went to New York, and conferred with Nathan Dane of Beverly, a native of the Hamlet, and at that time a member of congress. July 6 he presented his petition for the purchase of lands for the Ohio company, proposing terms and conditions. He called on the president of congress, General St. Clair, and other members of that body. This important law had been drawn by Mr. Dane, aided by Doctor Cutler. It established a government in the western federal territory, and expressly prohibited slavery therein. It was passed July 27. The terms of purchase of the land were accepted just as they were offered, and six million acres of land thus passed to the Ohio company. Doctor Cutler signed this private contract, which was an indented parchment. He then dined with General Knox, a large number being present, all old Continental officers except himself. Baron Steuben was one of their number.

Doctor Cutler returned to Boston Aug. 29, and attended a meeting of the company, making a report of the purchase of the land of congress, which was approved and confirmed.

Nov. 23, Gen. Rufus Putnam of Rutland, of the Danvers family, was appointed superintendent of all the business relating to the commencement of the settlement of the territory, the colonists to go forward, under his direction, in companies of four surveyors, twenty-two men to attend them, six boat builders, four carpenters, one blacksmith, and nine common hands, with two wagons, etc.

The first party started from Danvers at eleven o'clock, on Monday, Dec. 3, 1787, and was conducted by Maj. Halford White. The men constituting the party, numbering twenty-five, were from the Hamlet parish and Danvers. Those from the Hamlet had sent their baggage to Danvers on the previous Saturday; and two hours before daybreak, after breakfast at Doctor Cutler's house, the Hamlet party marched to Danvers, the Doctor going with them. When ready to go the men, the Doctor's son, Jervis Cutler, John Porter, Amos Porter, Ebenezer Porter, Nathaniel Sawyer, Isaac Dodge, Oliver Dodge, Josiah Whittredge, William Knowlton, Edmund Knowlton and David Wells, paraded in front of the house, and, after a short address from the Doctor, "full of good advice and hearty wishes for their happiness and prosperity," three volleys were fired, the men being armed. The little band moved forward amid the cheers of their neighbors who had assembled to see them off to the new land of promise. At Danvers Doctor Cutler formally placed the party under the command of Major White and Capt. Ezra Putnam. The large and well-constructed wagon containing their baggage had been prepared by the Doctor, and it preceded them on the march from Danvers. The wagon was covered with black canvas, and on its sides, in white letters, the Doctor painted these words: "For the Ohio." The weather was pleasant, and the sun shone clearly.

The party arrived on the Youghiogheny, or Ohio, river, at Simrall's ferry, Jan. 23, 1788. Another party had gone from Hartford, and met the Essex county party at the ferry Feb. 14. Together they descended the Ohio in a flat-bottomed boat called the "Mayflower." April 8 they arrived at the Muskingum, being somewhat hindered by the severity of winter in preparing to go down the Ohio from Pittsburg. The natives were kindly disposed: and the prospect of happy success was everywhere apparent. These pioneers proceeded at once to build homes, and sow and plant the ground in preparation for the coming settlers. Four block houses were built of square timber, two stories high, as forts.

May 18, Isaac Dodge and Oliver Dodge of Wenham left the Muskingum for their home, for the purpose of making provisions for the erection of mills. They came on foot, being only twenty-six days from Muskingum to Wenham.

Emigration to the new country began in the early spring, and hundreds of families had gone from New England before the end of May.

After the departure of the pioneers in December, 1787, Doctor Cutler began to prepare to build wagons for the purpose of emigration. July 21, 1788, he started for the new country in a sulky he had purchased for that purpose. Ephraim Kendall of Ipswich and Maj. Peter Oliver of Salem went with him, on horseback. They passed the little Muskingum, seven hundred and fifty-one miles from Ipswich, Aug. 19, and soon were "politely" received by their friends. They gave to the place the name of "Marietta," which it still bears.

Dr. Cutler was pastor of the Hamlet church, having been ordained over it in 1771. He had studied medicine before entering Yale college, from which he graduated in 1765. He began as a man of business in the whaling fleet of Martha's Vinyard; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1769. While pastor of the Hamlet church he was chaplain in the army of the Revolution, in 1776. He was a friend and regular correspondent of Benjamin Franklin; and was given the degree of LL. D. by his alma mater in 1789. He was a member of congress from 1801 to 1805, and belonged to many learned societies. After a pastorate, more or less broken, of more than fifty years, he died in Hamilton July 28, 1823. The frontispiece shows the Hamlet Parish meeting house, the residence of Doctor Cutler, and the first wagon of the pioneers to the Northwest territory.

Thus began the settlement of the central part of our country. Essex county men conceived the idea, obtained the authority, and carried out the scheme. Many other prominent men were engaged in the enterprise besides those mentioned, but space does not permit to tell their parts of the work.

WILL OF HENRY FAY.

PART OF SALEM IN 1700. NO. 9.

BY SIDNEY PERLEY.

The map on page 149, represents a part of the present town of Peabody, which was originally a part of Salem. It is bounded by what is now Main street, Wallis street, and North river, and runs southeasterly until it includes the Trask burying ground. The plan is drawn on a scale of three hundred feet to an inch. The dotted line shows the present dividing line between Salem and Peabody.

Main street was called simply the common in 1659; ye road or highway in 1681; "ye way yt leads from ye town of Salem by land to Ipswich," 1696; highway or common, 1706; ye country road, 1726; ye town common called Stone's plain, 1736; ye road leading to Salem Village, 1750; road leading from Salem to Boston, 1760; country road leading to Middleton and Andover, 1767; great country road leading to Salem, 1779; Boston road, 1783; road from Salem to Danvers South Parish meeting house, 1806; road leading from the South meeting house to Salem, 1816; and Main street, 1852. The western end of the main street shown on the map is now Mill street and formerly Back street.

Wallis street is slightly west of the original way into the North fields. This was the nearest way to get from Salem proper into the North fields by land. It was called Ye way that leads in ye gate to ye north field by Trask's fulling mill in 1696; highway, 1743; and way leading into the north field, 1767.

The river was so called in 1694; ye old mill brook, 1695; brook yt descends from John Trask's fulling mill, 1696; brook that runs from ye fulling mill, 1709; the brook or mill pond, 1732; mill pond, 1742; Trask's mill pond, 1754; river or mill pond, 1777; brook, 1779; and alewife brook, 1806.

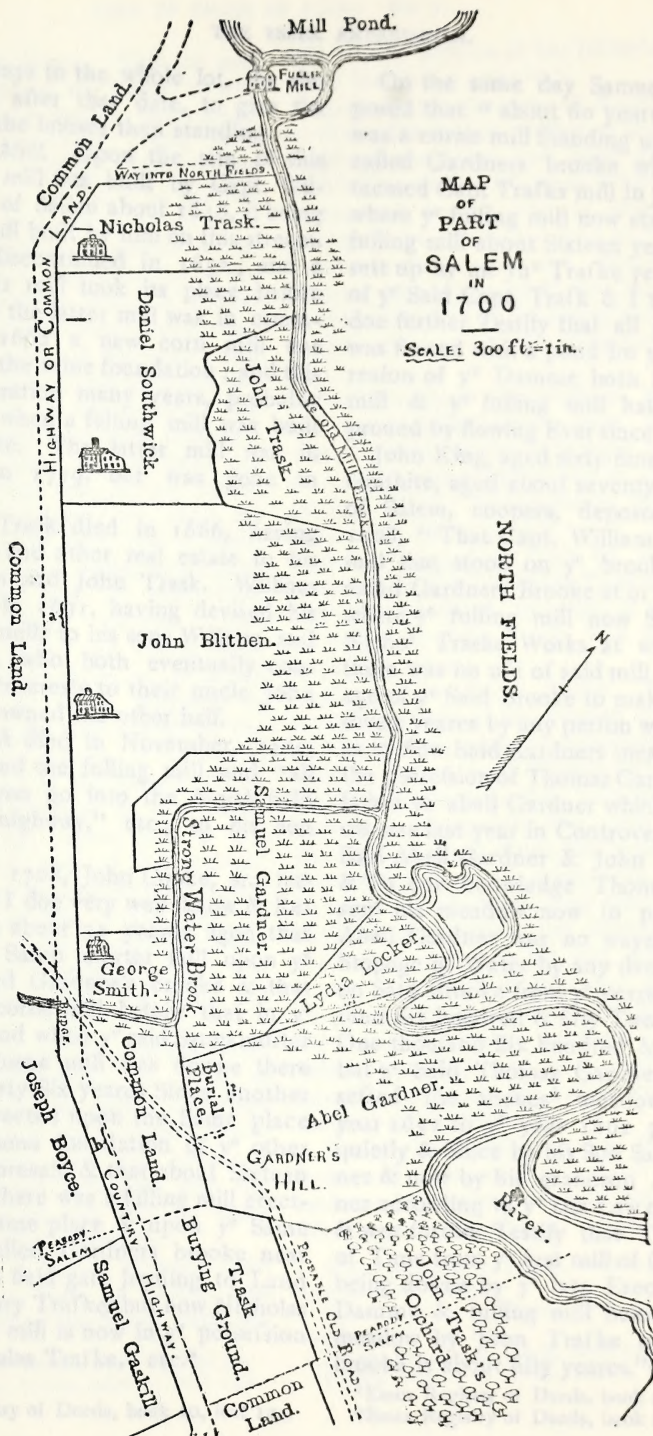

Strong Water brook was so called as early as 1638.

The brace marked "a" shows the place of beginning of Caller street, which was a private way in 1856, and known as Caller street in 1876, the Caller family having owned the land. The brace marked "b" shows where Grove street begins. This street was laid out about 1850.

That section of Main street between the Strong Water brook bridge and the Salem line was probably located when the bridge was built, in 1647. Before that time the road ran where the parallel lines of dots are shown, being a continuation of what is now Beaver street, and passing in the rear of the Trask burying ground. Crossing the bridge, about forty feet westerly of the brook, it passed through common land to the junction of Aborn and Washington streets. It continued to be used over the latter part of the way until about 1750. That part in the rear of the burying ground was probably little used after 1647, when the road was located south of the burial place, and finally became an unidentified part of the common lands.

This was also a part of the Quaker section, all, or nearly all, the families residing on this territory being of that faith. Lawrence Southwick, Daniel Southwick, Henry Trask and his wife Mary (daughter of Lawrence Southwick), John Smith, John Blethin, and other Friends. These names appear on the court records here as being punished for attending meetings of their peculiar order, and for embracing the Quaker faith.

In the sketches that follow, after 1700, titles and deeds referred to pertain to the houses and lands under and adjoining, but not always to the whole lot, the design being, after that date, to give the history of the houses then standing.

Fulling Mill. Upon the site of this mill a corn mill was built by Capt. William Trask of Salem about 1648, it being the third mill built by him on this stream. This was discontinued in 1652; and a samp mortar mill took its place before 1656, when the latter mill was in operation. In 1662 a new corn mill was erected on the same foundation; and this was in operation many years, probably until 1692, when a fulling mill was built upon its site. The latter mill was in operation in 1729, but was gone in 1754.

Captain Trask died in 1666, having devised this and other real estate to his sons William and John Trask. William Trask died in 1691, having devised his half of the mills to his sons William and John Trask, who both eventually conveyed their interests to their uncle John Trask, who owned the other half.

John Trask died in November, 1729, having devised the fulling mill and "all my land as you go into the North field above the highway," etc., to his son Nicholas.

April 21, 1708, John Cooke, sr., testified that "I doe very well know & Remember that about 52 yeares agoe that there was a Samp mortar mill upon y^e brooke called Gardner's brooke & that there was a corne mill before that in y^e same place and when y^e said Samp mortar mill & s^d Corne mill was downe there was about forty-Six yeares Since another corne mill erected upon the Same place & upon y^e Same foundation of y^e other Two mills aforesaid & that about Sixteen yeares agoe there was a fulling mill erected upon y^e same place & upon y^e Same brooke so called Gardners brooke near unto y^e north field gate Joyning to Land formerly Henry Trafkes but now Nicholas Trafks which mill is now in y^e possefsion of said Nicholas Trafke," etc.*

On the same day Samuel Archer deposed that "about 60 yeares Since there was a corne mill Standing upon y^e brooke called Gardners brooke which was Esteemed Capt Trafks mill in y^e Same place where y^e fulling mill now standeth which fulling mill about Sixteen yeares ago was sett up by mr Jn^o Trafke ye reputed Son of y^e Said Capt. Trafk & I this deponent doe further Testify that all y^e land that was flowed with a pond for y^e mills use by reason of y^e Damme both for y^e Corne mill & y^e fulling mill hath been Improved by flowing Ever since that time."*

John King, aged sixty-nine, and Samuel Golthite, aged about seventy years, both of Salem, coopers, deposed, April 22, 1708, "That Capt. William Trafks first mill that stood on y^e brooke in Salem caled Gardners Brooke at or near y^e place where y^e fulling mill now Stands which Nicho^s Traske Works at was downe & there was no use of said mill nor no Stopage of y^e Said Brooke to make a pond for divers yeares by any perfon whatsoever So as to flow Said Gardners meadow then in the possefsion of Thomas Gardner Grandfather to abell Gardner which Said meadow was last year in Controversy between Said Abell Gardner & John Trafke sen^r & To our knowledge Thomas Gardner sen^r his meadow now in possefsion of Abell Gardner was no wayes flowed by Stopage of Water by any damme or mill on Said Brooke from y^e yeare One thousand Six hundred & fifty Two to y^e yeare One thousand Six hundred & Sixty Two but y^e Said Thomas Gardner Sen^r possefised the aboues^d meadow from the year 1652 to y^e year 1662 peaceably & quietly & Since by his Son Samuel Gardner & now by his grandson Abell Gardner according to y^e last Law of Possefsion & wee further Testify that The distance of Time from y^e first mill of Cap^t Trafke being downe by y^e late Erecting of this Damme & fulling mill below Gardners meadow by John Trafke on Gardners brooke is about fifty yeares."†

Nicholas Trask House. This lot and the strip at the end of the Daniel Southwick lot, west of the dashes, constituted the homestead of Henry Trask, who owned it as early as 1659. His will was dated July 6, 1683; and in it he devised one-third of his real estate to his wife Mary, and the dwelling house and lot to his son Henry Trask, providing that if the son should die without issue, it should descend to the latter's sister's eldest sons, namely, Jereme, John and Benjamin; and if he died before his mother then she was to have a life estate in the whole. The daughter, Mary, was then dead, leaving a daughter Mary, who was to have her mother's part. The son, Henry Trask, apparently died, and June 11, 1694, an agreement was made with the mother, Mary Trask, who was a daughter of Lawrence Southwick, and at that time the wife of William Nichols. The agreement was carried out just a week later.* Jeremiah Meacham, jr., in behalf of his children by Mary, daughter of Henry Trask, had the strip shown on the map as the western portion of the Daniel Southwick lot, west of the dashes; Sarah Archer, another daughter of Mr. Trask, had the house and eastern part of the Nicholas Trask lot, east of the dashes; and Joseph Foster and his wife Anna, the other daughter of Mr. Trask, had the western portion of the homestead, west of the dashes. At that time (1694), the house was described as "a small old house."

Jeremiah Meacham, 2d, and his eldest son Jeremiah Meacham, 3d, both of Salem, for £4, 15s., in silver, conveyed their portion to their uncle Daniel Southwick, sr., of Salem, Jan. 14, 1694-5;† and it was afterward identified with the Daniel Southwick lot and will be mentioned in connection therewith.

Joseph Foster of Salem, planter, conveyed to Nicholas Trask of Salem, who was then conducting the fulling mill, his wife Anna's portion of her father's homestead March 12, 1695-6.*

Sarah Archer, daughter of Henry Trask, to whom the middle section of the homestead and the house had been assigned, married, secondly, Abraham Whittaker of Salem, and, for £2, 10s., in silver, they conveyed the house and land to Nicholas Trask March 20, 1695-6.† Widow Mary Nichols (the widow of Henry Trask) was to come and live in the house and have a garden spot as by the agreement with her.

Nicholas Trask removed to Mendon, and was a miller there, Sept. 5, 1743, when he sold this lot to Samuel Tompson of Swego, a new plantation in Dutchess county, N. Y., husbandman, the house apparently being gone.‡

John Trask Lot. This lot of marsh belonged to Capt. William Trask in 1659; and upon his death, in 1666, it descended to his son John Trask, who owned it until after 1700.

Daniel Southwick House. This lot, except the strip at the western end, west of the dashes, already mentioned, and also the lots of John Blethin and George Smith constituted the homestead of Lawrence Southwick, the glass maker. He was banished from the colony as a Quaker in 1659. He went, with his wife, to Long Island, where they died, of privation and exposure, on Shelter Island, the next spring. In his will, dated 10: 5 mo: 1659, and proved 29: 9: 1660, he devised to his son Daniel Southwick his dwelling house, orchard, etc., at Salem, provided that John Burnell shall have a house lot at the farther end of the orchard newly fenced in.

Daniel Southwick conveyed the house, barn, and three acres of upland and one and one-half acres of salt marsh to John Blethin of Lynn 28: 9: 1659;§ and it

Daniel Southwick, sr., conveyed to his son Lawrence Southwick of Salem this lot, with the southwest end of the house and northwest end of the barn, Feb. 15, 1706.†

Lawrence Southwick died in 1717; and in the division of his estate in 1730 the buildings and the land on which they stood were assigned to his widow Tamsin as dower. Their son Josiah Southwick of Salem, tailor, released his interest to his brother Daniel Southwick of Salem, tanner, 9 : 3 mo : 1739;‡ and probably the other heirs released their interests to him, though the record of the deeds has not been found.

Daniel Southwick, for £180, old tenor, conveyed the house and land to his brother Joseph Southwick, jr., of Salem, currier, Nov. 16, 1742.§

Joseph Southwick married Bethiah Callum of Uxbridge, and she, though a Quaker, furnished refreshments to the Danvers soldiers that rendezvoused before her house on the morning of their tramp to the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775. The granite Lexington monument, erected to the memory of the Danvers men that fell that day, stands in front of the site of this house. The local chapter of the Daughters of the Revolution was named for Mrs. Southwick. He died June 1, 1791, having in his will devised the estate to his son Edward Southwick. His wife survived him, remaining his widow until April 8, 1803, when her death occurred.

Edward Southwick was a tanner, and died Jan. 23, 1836; and his children,

Joseph Southwick, Edward Southwick of Augusta, Me., Jacob Southwick of Vassalborough, Me., and Samuel Philbrick of Brookline, and his wife Elizabeth, released their interest in the house and land about it to their brother Philip R. Southwick of Danvers, tanner; namely, Eliza, Feb. 21, 1838;* Edward, Oct. 12, 1838;† Jacob, March 21, 1842;‡ and Joseph, Nov. 4, 1842.§

Philip R. Southwick removed to Boston, and conveyed the estate to David Pingree of Salem, Sept. 1 1847.¶ Trustees under a deed of trust from Mr. Pingree conveyed the house and land to Isaac B. and Lewis W. Elliot, both of South Danvers, May 27, 1856.¶ They sold the house to Calvin Pierce, who took it down in 1862, and used the material in a new house which is now numbered 41 on Webster street, in Peabody. The picture of the ancient dwelling as it appeared in its last years, which is given on the opposite page, is a copy of a sketch made by Nathaniel Votin of England.

John Blethin House. This lot was a part of the Lawrence Southwick homestead. He devised it, in his will, dated 10 : 5 mo : 1659, and proved 29 : 9 : 1660, to his son Daniel Southwick, providing that John Burnell should have a house lot at the farther end of the orchard newly fenced in. Immediately after the will was made Daniel apparently took possession of the estate, knowing that his father would never return from his banishment, and 28 : 9 : 1659, conveyed it (probably to escape confiscation or its being taken to satisfy the fines that were repeatedly decreed against him as a Quaker) to John Blethin of Lynn, also a Quaker. After the storm of persecution was principally passed the estate was re-conveyed to Daniel Southwick, who was then of Salem, husbandman, by an undated deed.* Three acres of the lot was again conveyed to Mr. Blethin, but the deed has not been found. John Burnell released his interest in the house lot (one acre) at the eastern end of the premises, which was reserved to him in the will of Lawrence Southwick, to John Blethin June 16, 1664.† Mr. Blethin built a house upon the premises, removed thither from Lynn, being a husbandman, and died possessed of the estate. His executors conveyed the house and lot to Daniel Southwick, jr., March 24, 1704-5.‡

Daniel Southwick died in 1733, having devised the house and land around it to his son Jonathan. Jonathan Southwick was a husbandman, and lived in Salem. For £400, he conveyed the estate to his brother John Southwick, 3d, of Salem, shop-keeper, Feb. 28, 1738.§ John Southwick lived in the house, becoming a yeoman, and conveyed the house and land adjoining to his son Daniel Southwick of Danvers, yeoman, April 19, 1773.¶ Daniel Southwick died about 1800, and apparently the same house and lot was conveyed, Feb. 3, 1814, by Sarah Southwick of Danvers, singlewoman, the eastern part to Ebenezer Osborne of Danvers, trader, and the western part to Squires Shove of Danvers, tanner.¶ The house was then probably taken down.

George Smith House. This lot of half an acre was sold about 1650 by Lawrence Southwick (being the easternmost part of his homestead) to John Smith, but no legal conveyance passed between them. Mr. Smith built a house on the lot. Mr. Southwick died in 1660, and his son Daniel Southwick of Salem, yeoman, to whom the homestead had devised by his father's will, gave a deed of the lot to George Smith and Exercise Smith, the children of John Smith, who had deceased, March 17, 1681-2.* The daughter, Exercise Smith, married Samuel Pope of Salem, mariner, and they released their interest in the house and lot to her brother George Smith April 18, 1687.†

George Smith built a new house, and conveyed the western part of the old one to his son John Smith 5:1 mo: 1724-5;‡ and subsequently, July 12, 1740, his great barn, etc.§ George Smith died in 1744; having in his will, dated Aug. 10, 1744, and proved Jan. 6, 1745, devised the easterly part of his homestead to his son John Smith, and the westerly part to his son Samuel Smith.

Samuel Smith conveyed his interest in the mansion house of his late father, George Smith, to his brother John Smith Jan. 9, 1745.¶ John Smith removed to Mendon before July 4, 1748, when he conveyed to Roger Derby of Salem, saddler, a house and this land, but the old house was gone.¶

Samuel Gardner Lot. This lot of land originally belonged to Thomas Gardner, one of Salem's earliest planters. He died 29:10:1674, and this lot came into the possession of his son George Gardner. George Gardner died in 1679, and the lot descended to his son Capt. Samuel Gardner, who owned the lot many years after 1700.

Lydia Locker Lot. This lot of three-fourths of an acre of marsh was early owned by George Corwin of Salem, merchant, who, for twelve pounds, conveyed it to John Hill of Salem, wheelwright, July 22, 1679. Mr. Hill died the next year, having devised this lot to his wife Lydia. She married, secondly, George Locker, and owned the land in 1700.

Abel Gardner Lot. This lot of marsh and upland originally belonged to Thomas Gardner, and included the "bank of upland neare the strongwater broock || to his marsh||" granted to him by the town 15 : 3 : 1639, and the small grant to his son Samuel hereafter mentioned. He died 29 : 10 : 1674, and this lot came into the possession of his son Samuel, to whom the town granted an addition of fifteen or twenty rods of common "land by Strong Water Brook and Lying Over against Jo^s Boyse his house" May 16, 1688. This strip may have been the ancient roadway, then probably discontinued by the laying out of the road south of the Trask burying ground. Samuel Gardner died in October, 1689, and the lot came into the possession of his son Abel Gardner, who died possessed of it Nov. 10, 1739.

In this lot was the ancient burial place of the Gardner family, being used for that purpose as early as 1674. It continued to be so used until the construction of Grove street, which ran across one end of it, about 1850. Some of the remains were removed to the Harmony Grove cemetery, where two of the ancient grave-stones still stand, and other bodies were interred in the Trask burying ground.

Trask Burying Ground. This lot has always been public land. It was used as a burial place before 1669, and probably Capt. William Trask was interred there three years earlier. For many years it was used by the Trask family, whose original homestead it adjoined, and it is mentioned in the old deeds as "Trask's Burying Ground, so called."

Trask's Orchard. This lot will be described in the next article, when the remaining boundaries will be given.

EARTHQUAKES IN ESSEX COUNTY.

The greatest earthquake that New England experienced after its settlement by the English was that of Oct. 29, 1727. A drought had continued that summer from the middle of June to the middle of September, the month of July and the first week in August being very hot. Rain fell the first week in April only, and there were but one or two slight showers during the succeeding months of summer. The weather was sultry, and the heat parched the earth, which became dry to a great depth, many wells and springs, which had never failed before, being as free from water as the land. There was much lightning, but little rain. On the evening of August 1, at the close of a scorching day, the heavens burst out into a blaze of flame and a roar of thunder, the terrific display continuing for two or three hours. The sky was continually light with the frequent flashes; and a contemporary writer said it seemed "as if the heavens being on fire were dissolving and passing away with a great noise, and the earth also with its works was to be burned up."

About the first of September the drought was broken, and on the sixteenth of that month a violent northeast storm came on. The storm caused so high a tide that about two hundred loads of hay were carried away from the Newbury marshes. Eight or nine vessels were driven ashore at Salem and thirty-five at Marblehead. Great damage was done to vessels and towns all along the coast.

After the lightning, thunder and tempest came a tremendous earthquake. Oct. 24, the weather was very cold; three days later snow fell, and on the 28th the cold had greatly increased. Sunday, the 29th was fair and pleasant; in the evening the moon shone brightly, the air was calm and quietness prevailed. People retired at the usual hour, and were fast asleep when at twenty minutes before eleven a terrible noise followed by a roar and a rush of air suddenly woke them. In about half a minute, before they had time to become conscious of what was taking place around them, there came a pounce as if gigantic cannon had rolled together. Latches leaped out of their catches and doors flew open, houses rocked and trembled as if about to collapse, timbers moved in their mortises, hearthstones grated together, windows rattled, tops of chimneys pitched and fell, cellar walls fell, beds shook, pewter dishes fell from their shelves, lids of warming pans leaped and fell with a clang, and all movable things, especially in the upper rooms, were tossed about.

Most of the people instantly arose, and many of them ran out of doors in their night clothes, being so frightened that they did not realize what they were doing. But the earth shook so much they could not stand, and they were compelled to sit or recline upon the ground.

People who were awake said that a flash of light preceded the earthquake. It was seen as it passed the windows, and a blaze of fire seemed to run along the ground, dogs that saw it giving a sudden bark as if frightened. This light was immediately followed by a gentle murmuring sound on the still evening air, and then came a slight wind gently ruffling the foliage of the trees. This was succeeded by a rumbling noise as of distant thunder, which came nearer and nearer, and increased in intensity until it sounded like innumerable heavy carriages rapidly driven over pavements, or like the roar of a great furnace, but incomparably more fierce and terrible, having a hollow sound as if it was subterranean. Then the shock came suddenly, and houses tottered and reeled with the trembling and heaving of the ground. The extraordinary disturbance came from the northwest, and went in a southeasterly direction, and occupied about two minutes of time.

Cattle ran bellowing about the fields, acting as though suffering great distress, probably being frightened at the sudden and awful commotion in the still hours of night.

At eleven o'clock another shock came, less effective and quieter than the first, and at a quarter to twelve another. Many people would not return to their beds, but dressed, and prepared to remain up till morning, being very uncertain as to what might next occur, and apprehending the worst. At Salem the people sat up nearly all night. At Rowley they flocked to the house of Rev. Edward Payson, the pastor of the church there, as if he were able to save them from impending harm; but the house was too small to hold so large a number, and the meeting house was opened at the midnight hour, the remainder of the night being spent in prayer.

The shocks were repeated at three and five o'clock, but with abated force, and in due time the sun rose, greeting with complacency the fearing people. It was a night never to be forgotten by those who experienced it.

The great shock was felt in New York and Pennsylvania, and extended all along the coast to the Gulf of Mexico, doing considerable damage in the West India islands.

In the towns near the Merrimac river the earthquake was felt more severely than in any other section of New England. A vast amount of stone wall was thrown down in addition to injuries that were general throughout New England.

At Rowley, many chimney tops were dislodged, and Newbury suffered similarly. In the latter place the chimneys of Mr. Knight and Mr. Toppan are mentioned as having fallen, and the doorstone of Benjamin Plummer fell into the cellar.

Brick houses were cracked and in some places considerably shattered. But the principal damage consisted in the breaking of dishes and injuries to tops of chimneys, in many cases a few bricks only being knocked off, though in others the chimneys were so shaken as to make their rebuilding necessary. Not a wooden house was broken nor a person or animal injured.

The islands off the coast were shaken as much as the main-land, and the ocean was in great commotion, its roar being much louder than usual. Seamen said it seemed as if their vessels had struck a sand bar.

The character of the land, springs and wells was considerably affected. Some upland was changed into quagmire and in a few instances marsh land was raised, being subsequently too dry for its native grass to grow. In the meadow near the house then owned and occupied by Samuel Bartlett, at Newbury, a new spring was opened. The water of some wells was improved in quality, while in others it was made permanently impure. Some wells became dry, and the temperature of others was greatly changed.

Remembering that cities and other places had disappeared by the operation of earthquakes, some people were alarmed lest they might be thus destined. There was indeed some foundation therefor, as chasms a foot or more in width were opened in some places. In Newbury there were more than ten such fissures in low clay ground, fine white sand and ashes being forced up through them in varying quantities. In one place near Spring island in that town, were thrown up from sixteen to twenty loads of sand with some slight indications of sulphur. Upon throwing some of the sand on hot coal in a dark room blue sulphurous flames and a slight odor of brimstone were detected. In another place near that island, about forty or fifty rods from the residence of Henry Sewall, the ground opened, and for several days water boiled out of the crevice like a spring. Within three weeks it became dry and the earth closed.

The people were affected by this earthquake as they had never been before, being fearful of divine judgment for their sins and failure in religious duties. The clergy taught them that it was "a loud call to the whole land to repent and fear and give glory to God." Lieutenant-governor Dummer recommended that Thursday should be kept as a day of fasting and prayer throughout the province. Many sermons delivered on the latter day, and on other days at that time, upon the occasion, were printed and are still extant. In Salem, a meeting was held on Saturday at the "upper" meeting house which was attended by the largest congregation that ever gathered in that edifice.

The clergy improved the opportunity of leading the public mind toward the choice of a better portion; and the people were willing to be taught, and ready to believe. Many who had before cared nothing for a religious life became penitent and devout. Seriousness was on the faces of most of the people, and the churches were increased universally, some receiving large additions. In Chebacco parish, Ipswich, for instance, seventy-six were admitted. The earthquake had a good effect upon some bad characters, who became truly reformed, and afterward led honorable and moral lives. But, in too many cases, when their fears went, their religious thoughts and habits were forgotten.

Earthquake shocks were repeated a number of times in the following week, and also in November and December, but with less and less force.

In 1744, there was another terrific earthquake, which was thought by some to have been nearly equal in severity to that of 1727. In May there had been two slight shocks, occurring in both instances in the morning. At a quarter past ten on Sunday morning, June 3, just after church services had begun, the severest shock came. It reached only about a hundred miles; and was ushered by a loud rumbling, which threw the people into consternation as they remembered the experience of seventeen years before.

People ran out of their houses fearing they would fall upon them; and the rector and many of the congregation ran out of the Episcopal church at Newbury (in that part now Newburyport). In the Hamlet parish in Ipswich (now the town of Hamilton), the shock came when the pastor, Rev. Mr. Wigglesworth, was preaching. The congregation was greatly alarmed; but he endeavored to calm them, remarking that "there can be no better place for us to die in than the house of God."

Bricks were shaken from chimneys and stone wall was thrown down.

At about five o'clock in the afternoon, another and lesser shock was felt at Salem and adjacent towns, and people screamed and ran out of doors. Three or more smaller shocks were perceived that night and the next morning. On the twentieth, another shock came, causing people to run out of meeting at Salem. Eight days later there was another.

May, June and July were all dry months, but whether that fact had any connection with the earthquake is not known.

Eleven years later another earthquake occurred. This was in November, 1755. On the first day of the month the city of Lisbon, in Portugal, with its convents, five churches and royal palaces, was almost totally destroyed, sixty thousand persons being killed by the falling buildings.

Seventeen days later, at a quarter past four in the morning of Tuesday, the eighteenth, it shook New England, being the most destructive and awful earthquake that has been experienced here in historic times. At that morning hour the heavens were clear, the air calm, a Sabbath-like stillness pervaded the region, and at the time of the shock the moon shone brightly, being about two hours high. It was a beautiful night, and nothing uncommon occurred except that the roar of the ocean seemed louder than usual.

Here, earthquakes have always come without announcement, in all seasons and weathers, and at all hours of the day and night.

The earthquake of 1727 began very gently, but that of 1755 came suddenly, like gigantic pulsations of the earth, and tossed everything about, being followed for about a minute with a peculiar tremulous motion, which some thought to be the resultant motion of the first shock and the gradual lessening of its force. But it was followed instantly by a quick vibration and jerks, much more terrible than the first. Dr. Edward A. Holyoke of Salem wrote in his diary that he "thought of nothing less than being buried instantly in the ruins of the house."

The course of the earthquake was the same as that of 1727, from the northwest to the southeast, but this continued longer, from two and a half to three minutes.

People were in a state of extreme fright, thinking that the earth might be in process of dissolution. A writer of that time said, "I walked out about sunrise, and every face looked ghastly. In fine, some of our solid and pious gentlemen had such an awe and gloom spread over their countenances as would have checked the gay airs of the most intrepid." Animals were also alarmed at the mysterious and awful motions of the ground, and oxen and cows lowed and hastened to their barns, the only source of protection they knew, or ran about the fields when no place of refuge offered. Dogs went to their masters' doors and howled; and birds left their perches, and flew about the earth, fluttering there a long time, apparently being afraid to again alight on tree or land. The ocean along the coast was affected as perceptibly as the land.

The damage done by this earthquake was far greater than that caused by any other that has been experienced here. The vibratory motion of the earth was so great and sudden that pewter dishes were thrown from the dressers, clocks were stopped, and weather-vane rods were bent. Much stone wall was thrown down, and subterranean streams were changed, in consequence of which many wells became dry. The principal damage consisted of the destruction of chimneys. They were dislocated in all sorts of ways, some being broken several feet from the top, and partly turned as though there had been a swivel at the place. Others fell on the roof, the section broken off remaining intact, and having slipped down to the eaves jutting over, being just ready to fall; and others broke the roof. Wooden buildings were much damaged by being rocked; but brick buildings were injured most. In spite of the great danger and many narrow escapes, no person or animal was killed or seriously injured in this county.

In the valley of the Merrimac it was not quite as severe as the earthquake of 1727; its noise was not as loud, and it did less damage. The towns along the seashore felt it most, it gradually increasing in force as it approached the ocean. It was felt from Nova Scotia to South Carolina, and inland for a great distance, the great American lakes feeling it severely as shown by the agitation of their waters. Traces of the earthquake still exist in some places after the lapse of a century and a half.

About an hour after the first shock, as day broke, the ground was again shaken, but with abated force. For four days slight shocks occurred daily, and on Saturday evening, the twenty-second, the people were again alarmed by what proved to be only a slight shock. Again, after the people had retired for the night on the evening of December 19, there were two or three more shocks. Dull and calm weather, and a heavy atmosphere, succeeded the severe shaking the earth had received.

Religious services and fasts were held immediately after the first and greatest shock and appeals to God for preservation were made, the people being in a state of almost frenzied excitement. The educated and ignorant were alike frightened. December 24, Lieutenant-governor Phips ordered a fast, saying in his proclamation therefor that, "It having pleased Almighty God, in a most awful and surprising manner to manifest his righteous anger against the provoking sins of men by terrible and destructive earthquakes and inundations in divers parts of Europe and by a late severe shock of an earthquake on this continent and in this province in particular, which has been succeeded by several others, although less violent than the first." The pastors of Gloucester kept a fast on account of the earthquake Jan. 1, 1756, preaching forenoon and afternoon.

The prospect of death turned the attention of the people toward those things that cannot be shaken, and the clergymen improved the opportunity to make a religious impression upon them. Many were led to reflect on the lives they had led, and to seek reconciliation with their Maker, the membership of the churches being considerably increased in consequence.

During the three centuries of our history there have been here several hundred earthquakes, the great majority of them being hardly noticeable, while a considerable number have resulted in damage. We have often expressed our satisfaction at dwelling in a land that was free from the terrible convulsions the tropical sections of the globe experience. But history shows that we are not exempt from the awful rumblings and shakings and dangers that are commonly supposed to belong almost exclusively to other lands. Nearly every year our region is disturbed by these internal commotions.

THE PIONEER.

BY MAURICE THOMPSON.

If I could flute, O thrush, like you,
I'd swing upon the hedge,
And trill a pastoral strong and true
About the maul and wedge.

The gnarled maul my grandsire swung
And made the forest boom,
While his good wife a-spinning sung,
Or swayed across the loom.

Give him a song, the brave and true,
Him of the wedge and maul,
Whose hero heart and hand could do
The drudgery for us all!

Give him, the brave old pioneer,
A century-closing song,
The whole choir sing, the nation cheer,
A hundred million strong!

384. Mr. ——— Martin married Elizabeth ———, who was born about 1740, and died in March, 1816, in St. Albans, Vt. They lived in Lynn or Salem until Mr. Martin's death, which occurred, probably, about 1800, or a little after. They had children: (1) Mary, born about 1766; married, Dec. 23, 1792, at Marblehead, Mass., to Richard Whittemore of Marblehead, and soon after removed to St. Albans, Vt., where she died April 26, 1855; (2) Sargent, married Betsey (or, Elizabeth) Meader, and resided in Lynn, where he died about 1795; and possibly others.

On April 15, 1795, Elizabeth Martin, widow filed a bond as administratrix of the estate of Sargent Martin, deceased. This bond is signed, as sureties, by William Hawkes and Ebenezer Martin, jr. It is possible that Ebenezer Martin, jr., may have been a brother of Sargent and Mary Martin. If so, the "jr." would seem to indicate that the father's name was Ebenezer, also.

Wanted, the parantage of Sargent and Mary Martin.

385. Marblehead records say that Abijah B. Bartlett married Elizabeth Bartlett Sept. 16, 1792, and that the husband died in the hospital in New York June 13, 1813. Bentley's records of Salem speak of this family as living on Union street, Salem, and of the death of their daughter Abigail July 13, 1816. Wanted, some account of the ancestry of this branch of the Bartlett family, or some suggestion as to where to look for it.

386. Mary N. Brown married George Davis, both of Salem, Mass., Oct. 2, 1808; and two months later her sister Betsey N. Brown married John Davidson, both of Salem. Mary is said to have been born in Wenham or Windham. Is there a record of a Mary Brown, as having been born in any Windham in New England about 1787? Who was she?

Salem.

ANSWERS.

344. Roger Preston and wife Martha of Salem had son John², whose age is uncertain. He was in the Narragansett war from Andover, and there may have been a John of Hadley in the same war. Martha Preston, widow of Roger¹, married, secondly Nicholas Holt of Andover in 1666, and her son John Preston² came here as an apprentice to one of our Andover Johnsons. He married the widow of his step-brother John Holt in 1687. She was Sarah Gerry³ (daughter of Nathaniel² and Ann (Douglas) Gerry of Roxbury, and grand-daughter of Arthur¹ and Frances Gerry). He removed to Windham county, Conn., after 1712. In 1727 (Salem Deeds, volume 67, page 199), John Preston, sr., of Windham deeded to John, jr., rights to Narragansett lands he acquired in service with Captain Gardner's troop of Salem. He was uncle to John, jr., and both were alive in 1727.—Miss Charlotte H. Abbott, Andover, Mass.

362. See History of Lynnfield, Mass., page 12, about log houses.—G. F. D.

372. Among Cambridgeport deeds there is one dated March 1, 1759. Joseph Lovewell to Joseph Lovewell jr., in which the following appears: "thence on my own land ("Cook's land") to land of Thomas Pierce." Also, in an agreement (No. 10,188, old series) "between widow Hannah Lovel [Lovewell], relict of Joseph Lovell, late of Weston, deceased, and the children, Joseph Lovel of Weston and Mary now wife of Samuel Morse of Needham, heirs of the deceased," etc.; signed by Joseph Lovewell, Hannah Lovewell, Mary Morse and Samuel Morse; and dated Nov. 6, 1732. Her brother Joseph married Deborah Morse.—S. Harrison Lovewell, 432 Washington street, Walla Walla, Wash.

375. According to records formerly in the probate office at Exeter, but removed a few years ago to the State Library in Concord, Jno. Scrivner of Dover made his will Nov. 27, 1674, and it was proved June 27, 1676, the legatees named in it being his wife Mary, eldest son John (a minor), and other children, Edward, Thomas and Elizabeth, the latter daughter being under eighteen. Thomas Scrivner of Kingston made his will March 28, 1718, and it was proved June 4, 1718, the legatees named in it being his wife Hannah, and children, John (a minor), Deborah, Edward, Eliza, Samuel, and perhaps one unborn. In the administration account, "by Hannah Flint, formerly widow of Thomas Scrivner of Kingstown," in 1718, "three sons" are mentioned, Edward being the only one named; and the youngest child was born six months after its father's death.—Katharine L. Morrill, Exeter, N. H.

EDITORIAL.

This number completes volume six of The Essex Antiquarian. There have been published during the year the wills proved in Essex county from 1654 to 1656; the gravestone inscriptions in the town of Danvers before 1800; the genealogies of Essex county families from Balch to Barr; the record of the Essex county Revolutionary soldiers and sailors from Balch to Bartholomew; abstracts of the Old Norfolk county records, 1655 to 1668; Salem quarterly court records and files, 1647 to 1649; and miscellaneous genealogical notes from the records from Atwood to Barker.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

GEN. JOHN SULLIVAN AND THE BATTLE OF RHODE ISLAND. By Thomas Hamilton Murray. Providence, R. I., 1902. This is a pamphlet of thirty-two duodecimo pages, and published by the American-Irish Historical Society, the author being the secretary-general of the society. It includes a sketch of General Sullivan, and a description of the battle, Aug. 29, 1778, which was pronounced by Lafayette to be "the best fought action of the war."

VISITORS' GUIDE TO SALEM. Salem, Mass., 1902. This is a new edition of the local guide book published by the Essex Institute. Paper; small quarto; 160 pages; 40 illustrations. The book is divided into eight chapters, viz: Introductory; Hawthorne; The Witchcraft Delusion; The Essex Institute; The Peabody Academy of Science; Complete Itinerary; Brief Itinerary; and, Excursions. The arrangement is more systematic than any of the preceding editions, and by aid of the map, which shows by dotted lines the way to go to the various places of interest a stranger can readily find his way alone, reading as he goes, if he wishes. Price, 25 cents.

ROBERT ADAMS OF NEWBURY, MASS., and His Descendants, 1635-1900. By Andrew N. Adams. Rutland, Vt., 1900. This genealogical history of Robert Adams of Newbury, Mass., and descendants includes many collateral branches of other families. It is bound in cloth, and well printed, on good paper; contains 564 octavo pages; and has thirty illustrations, all portraits in half-tone, except the frontispiece which is a picture of the ancient Adams house in Byfield, Mass. The index contains 46 pages, and gives the christian names of persons bearing the name of Adams, and an index to other surnames. The work is apparently quite complete, and is a valuable addition to our family histories. The price in cloth is $5.50, and in morocco, $6.50; and may be had of the author, Andrew N. Adams, Fair Haven, Vt.
